Lily Blooms Not the Only Easter Bid

Local Forecast: Fair and Mild

Floweriest Parade In Many Years to Swing Up Avenue

The floweriest, most feminine Easter parade in many a year is ready to swing down Jasper Avenue and at this stage it is safe to predict.

1—That the women's hats will, as usual, set men agape.

2—That there'll be a lot of good old navy blue, nothwithstanding all the new grays, rusts, checks and flower-sprigged prints.

Virtually no holds are barred as to hats. There are Gibson girl sailors swathed in veils with waist-length ends, giddy little pillboxes, clown cones, bonnets and shallow, tiled bits of headgear held on with an old-fashioned snood.

Everything his light, gay touches—even the gray man-tailored suit which apparently is going to be an Easter favorite. This year it has a frilly lingerie blouse. Oh my!

Shoes have cut-out toes, and stockings are sheer enough to show tinted toe-nails. The parade should be good.

GOLD'S GHOST HITS CHANNELS OF U.S. TRADE

Purchasing Power of More Than Billion Dollars Effected

By IRVING PERLMETER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 16—The purchasing power of the United States treasury's $1,392,000,000 of desterilized gold poured into trade channels today, although the bullion itself did not leave its vaults.

The treasury got a spendable credit for the metal by depositing in the federal reserve system a simple memorandum, promising to pay on demand an equivalent amount of gold certificate currency backed by the metal.

This was possible because gold is the only international standard of value which has survived centuries of experimentation with such articles as beads, corn, copper and silver.

By law, each ounce of approximately pure gold, gold is worth $35 in the United States, but even if there were no law, the value might be nearly as high. The European free market price usually has been slightly under $35, but occasionally it has exceeded that figure within the last several months.

HALF WORLD'S GOLD

Both because the American price usually was a few cents higher and because the United States appeared to be a safe place to hoard the money of war-scared foreigners, about $5,000,000,000 in gold came here during the last five years.

The desterilized gold largely was part of this inflow. As a result, the treasury now owns $12,800,000-

New Head of Eire Will Be Elected In May

DUBLIN, April 16.—Announcement was made Friday the new president of Eire will be elected May 31 with the president assuming office June 30.

JAP CABINET SHARPLY SPLIT IN TWO CAMPS

TOKYO, April 16. — Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye today faced the first genuine Japanese government crisis since the start of the Japanese-Chinese conflict, now in its 10th month.

The cabinet was sharply divided into two rival camps and the premier was reported threatening to resign over whether Japan should mobilize her full military strength in an effort to achieve a quick victory.

Rigid censorship of news from China kept the people of Japan ignorant of develoments at Taierchwang, southern Shantung province city.

Rebel Minions Swarm Coastline Of Mediterranean

LONDON, April 16.—Reuters news agency reported last night from Madrid that General Jose Miaja, government central front commander, admitting the insurgents have cut government territory in two by reaching the Mediterranean, announced he had been commissioned to govern the central zone separately.

TRAIGUERA, Spain, April 16.—Government Spain was cut in two Friday by General Miguel Aranda's motorized columns who captured Vinaroz and Benicarlo on the Mediterranean in rapid succession and brought 18 miles of the vital coast road linking Barcelona to Valencia and Madrid under their control and spread out to occupy 22 miles coast line.

The victorious insurgents swept right through Vinaroz and, swinging along northward on the Barcelona-Valencia "lifeline" captured Ulldecona, small inland village midway between Vinaroz and Tortosa.

Similar tactics were followed by a second insurgent column which seized Benicarlo, small seaport about eight miles south of Vinaroz, and planted the red-and-white insurgent banner on the Mediterranean.

TAKE ALCANAR

A third detatchment marched rapidly up the secondary road connecting Tortosa and Vinaroz and took Alcanar, a village just north of the border separating Castellon

GREY OWL RESTS TWIXT TALL ELMS

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., April 16.—Grey Owl was buried Friday between towering elms on the shores of Lake Ajawaan. It was the author-naturalist's wish that he be laid among the evergreen glades in surroundings that supplied inspiration for most of his books and lectures.

Grey Owl, who fought with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces in the Great War as Archibald Belaney and who often related his father was Scotch and his mother an Apache Indian, died Wednesday of pneumonia.

Airship Expert Hints Sabotage On Hindenburg

NEW YORK, April 16.—Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, veteran champion of dirigibles for commercial and military use, says in a book to be published April 16 that the possibility of sabotage in the destruction of the German airship Hindenburg with loss of 36 lives last May "has not been eliminated."

Roosevelt Issues Challenge—Not Retreat in Speech

WASHINGTON, April 16—Stripped of all other meanings, President Roosevelt's vast new recovery program and the tactics he used to rally mass sentiment behind it boil down to one conclusion in the minds of most observers.

He has staked his hopes of completing the new deal, his own place in United States history perhaps, on an effort to turn the recession tide before next election day, and backed his decision with a call for new billions of government lending and spending.

That the president welcomes a critical test of his leadership and his hold on popular support in an off-year election stands out sharply in the final "personal word" with which he concluded his broadcast explanation of his recovery proposals.

As expected, Mr. Roosevelt backed down nowhere on his reform program, despite party splits defeats in congress and the new cycle of unemloyment and distress.

His last word to his listeners was one of challenge, not retreat for all the conciliatory tone of the address. He was speaking of the whole course of his administration, of his bitterly-fought reform policies and not alone of his recovery program, when he said:

"I believe we (the administration) have been right in the course we have charted. To aban-

Program To Aid Capital Flow Is Announced

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The United States securities commission has announced a three-point program to speed the flow of capital to small business concerns and thus assist President Roosevelt's pump-priming campaign.

The agency will:

1—Establish a unit to aid firms which intend to register issues of securities (registration with the S.E.C. is a preliminary to selling securities to investors.

2—Reduce the amount of financial information now required in registration of statements for small security issues of established enterprises.

FOUR KIDDIES LOSE LIVES IN LEAKING CRAFT

Man Also Loses Life in Vain Attempt At Rescue

SUDBURY, Ont., April 16—Four children on a forbidden holiday fishing expedition in a leaking, home-made rowboat were drowned in Minnow lake here Friday. A man also lost his life in an unsuccessful rescue attempt before two other children were pulled to safety.

The dead: Paul Ranger, seven, and his 10-year-old brother, Armand; Lawrence Ross, 10, and his brother Gerard, eight, and John Dinwoodie, 21, one of several lake residents who participated in the rescue. Nine-year-old Rene Ross, a brother of Lawrence and Gerard, and Damas Spencer, 10, were rescued.

A stiff breeze was blowing, adding to the children's confusion. Gerard and Lawrence Ross were seen to leap out of the boat, followed by the Ranger brothers, apparently in an attempt to reach floating ice a few yards away. Rene Ross and Spencer remained in the sinking boat.

As the boys jumped, George and John Dinwoodie, brothers pushed

SOUTH AFRICAN POLITICS AGAIN AT BOILING POINT

CAPE TOWN, April 16. — South Africa's political arena, for years the scene of heated party rivalry, is buzzing again with unprecedented activity. Party rallies, open-air meetings, vans with blaring loud speakers and intensive house-to-house canvassing have become the daily fare of the nation in one of the most spirited general election campaigns in the history of the union.

Opposition To Big U.S. Warships Arises In Senate

WASHINGTON, April 16. — Opponents of the United States administration's "big navy" bill centred their efforts today on an attempt to eliminate authorization for three 45,000-ton super-dreadnaughts.

"If we can't defeat the bill, we may at least be able to stop the building of more battleships," said Senator Nye (C.E.P., North Dakota), a leader of the bloc which contends such vessels are unnecessary except for a campaign of aggression.

New Gold Lode Bared In North At Yellowknife

Prospectors Uncover New Lead in Famous District Where They Sold Properties For $500,000 in Cash

M. L. "Mickey" Ryan, well known northern transportation man, his brother Pat Ryan, and Tom Payne, the prospector who uncovered the now famous Ryan mine, a 60 per cent interest in which was sold to Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., Ltd., for $500,000 cash, the vendors retaining a 40 per cent interest in the property, are in the limelight again with another rich discovery.

The new strike is about 40 miles north of Yellowknife Bay in the same area as the Ryan Mines Ltd., and samples brought into the city show that a high grade ore body has been struck, the samples being so rich that the gold can literally be dug out of them with a pen-knife

It is the intention of the Ryans and Payne to develop the new property themselves and the Ryan Exploration and Development Company Limited has been formed for the purpose, with Mickey Ryan as president, Tom Payne as vice-president, and Pat Ryan as treasurer. Frank Newson of Edmonton is secretary of the new company.

IN EVANS' HANDS

Development of the new mine will be in the hands of T. O. Evans, mining engineer from California, a brother-in-law of Mickey Ryan and a mine manager of over 25 years' experience in the United

ROYAL GROUP PROBES PROVE OTTAWA PROFIT

Costs of Commissions Overshadowed by Financial Results

OTTAWA, April 16.—Although attempts are made at various times to charge the Mackenzie King government with saddling the people of Canada with huge costs for the various commissions set up, the textile commission, costing $173,231 being especially singled out for attention, the real facts are that as a result of that one commission sums exceeding $2,000,000 have been claimed by the federal treasury, money which would never have been received otherwise.

All commissions, royal and otherwise, big and small, since the King government took office in 1935, with salaries and expenses, have cost in all $1,123,967.

CLAIMS ARE FILED

Today claims against seven textile companies of Canada by the income tax branch, department of national revenue, aggregating more than $2,000,000 in principal and interest, are pending in the exchequer court at Ottawa.

The seven companies named include: Canadian Cottons, Ltd.; Shawinigan Cotton Co. Ltd.; Wabasso Cotton Co. Ltd., Cornwall and York Cotton Mills Ltd.; Dominion Textile Co. Ltd., Sherbrooke Cotton Co. Ltd., and Drummondville Cotton Co. Ltd.

In the case of two companies alone, the claims for balances due on income and war profits tax aggregate nearly a quarter of a million dollars each, without interest. As some of the balances alleged due extend back as far as 1916, the interest in many cases nearly equals the principal.

It was out of the much criticized

DR. HARDY IS ELECTED HEAD OF C. A. H. A.

OTTAWA, April 16.—Dr. W. G. Hardy, Edmonton, was elected president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association at the annual meeting here today. He succeeds Cecil Duncan, Ottawa, who held the position for the usual two-year term.

George S. Dudley, Midland, Ont., was elected first vice-president, stepping up to the position held by Dr. Hardy.

Both men were given acclamations.

South Africa Is Ordering Fleet Huge Airliners

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, April 16.—To cover the great "African air circle," the projected 7,000-mile route linking the whole of northern Africa with the Union, South African Airways have ordered an additional 19 multi-engined air liners, all of which will be delivered this year.

The line, which will carry mails and passengers all the way from the Cape to the mouth of the Congo river on the west coast of Africa, then 2,000 miles inland to Kenya and finally back to Cape Town, will be inaugurated in June.

Bank Night Fun Dampened With New Postal Law

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Postmaster General Farley Friday barred the mails to any printed matter pertaining to bank nights, the patented system of prize drawing at theatres, etc., sponsored by Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., of Denver, Colo. The order, however, will not affect the actual holding of bank night drawings but will be a blow to their promotion.

HITLER'S VISIT TO ROME MAY BE POSTPONED

LONDON, April 16.—There is widespread belief in Rome that Chancellor Hitler's trip to Rome, set for May 2, will be put off, Oliver Simmonds, Conservative member of parliament, reported today on his return from a study of Italian defence preparations against air raids.

Speaking of the effect of the Anglo-Italian agreement on Italo-German relations, Mr. Simmonds declared: "Everywhere joy was expressed at the Anglo-Italian accord.

"The man in the street is still deeply resentful of the annexation of Austria."

EUROPE PEACE HOPES RISE IN PACT SIGNING

Britain, Italy Write Finis To Mediterranean Tension

ROME, April 16.—The long-awaited Anglo-Italian accord was signed here today. The official ceremony of signing took place amid glittering diplomatic formality in the Chigi Palace. Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano signed for Italy and the Earl of Perth, the British ambassador, for Great Britain.

ROME, April 16. — European peace hopes rose today as Great Britain and Italy wrote finis to the Mediterranean tension of the last three years.

Italians hoped the signing by the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galezzo Ciano, and the Earl of Perth, British ambassador, of an accord already approved by Premier Mussolini and the British cabinet will open a new era marked by understanding and mutual respect.

An additional guarantee of Mediterranean tranquility was promised with the signature of the Egyptian minister to that part of the agreement concerning Italian relations with Egypt.

FRIENDLY RELATIONS

That resumption of friendly relations with Great Britain brought a feeling of vast relief to Italians everywhere was evident from the comment of the man in the street as well as from the approving, albeit carefully defined editorials in the controlled press.

The latter pointed out the accord in no way replaced the Rome-Berlin axis nor changed Italian policy in general.

Great Britain Is Preparing To Buy 1,000 U.S. Planes

WASHINGTON, April 16. — A person described as "highly authoritative" said today Great Britain intends to buy approximately 1,000 war planes in the United States. Most of them will be high-speed bombers with medium range, this person said, expressing belief United States factories will be capable of filling the order without interfering with war plane building program of United States army and navy.

It has been officially announced in London that exploratory steps have been taken in regard to purchase of aircraft in Canada and the United States. Negotiations are said to have been started with three Canadian firms. One newspaper has advocated the construction of new plants at Windsor, Ont., for large-scale production.

American experts say Britain does not need the long-range type of bomber used by the United States, because of geographical differences, but can buy in this nation plenty of planes capable of meeting any needs on the continent.

A six months lag must intervene between delivery to the American armed forces of the second plane of a certain type before other planes of the same type can be sold abroad. Even after this date, the army and navy must give their consent through the national munitions control board of the state department.

The person disclosing Britain's intentions said he did not believe the army and navy would object seriously to the export of large numbers of American warplanes.

SHANGHAI, April 16.—Chinese forces assaulted Yihsien in Shantung province today with artillery, bombing planes and infantry, determined to repeat the great victory it tasted at Taierhchwang, 20 miles farther south.

New field guns were wheeled up and hammered at the walls, after cracking Japanese positions on the east, southeast and northeast. Planes dropped bombs. Chinese infantry systematically attacked

ROME-BERLIN AXIS NOT HIT BY NEW PACT

ROME, April 16.—Virginio Gayda, Fascist commentator, stressed Friday night in a Giornale D'Italia editorial that the Anglo-Italian pact to be signed Saturday is no contradiction to the policy of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Between Germany and Italy, Gayda declared, "there can only be harmony and liaison; that is Rome's firm intent, which is certainly shared by London."

The German government was constantly informed by Italy of the progress of negotiations with Great Britain, Gayda said.

Dominion Government Taking Increased Interest In Frontier Affairs

ANADA MARKS FRESH PHASES OF NEW NORTH

Wonder Gains As Resources Developed By Airplane Travel

OTTAWA, April 16.—As min- ral exploitation of the far north ushes Canada's frontier to the rctic ocean, the Dominion gov- rnment is taking an increasing terest in the administration nd problems of the Northwest erritories.

That vast northern territory cov- ing more than 1,300,000 square les is coming into its own as a nificant part of the Dominion llowing spectacular mining de- lopments aided by advance in mmercial aviation.

Some sanguine government offi- ls visualize a 10th Canadian ovince eventually will result with e capital at Fort Smith, on the ave River, 475 miles north of Ed- onton. Others point out there are far only about 1,500 white peo- e in the entire Territories along th 4,000 Indians and about 4,300 kimos.

ENTIONED IN HOUSE

However, the government is giv- g its attention to the situation ising out of new mining and com- ercial developments in the Ter- tories and the matter has been entioned in the House of Com- ons this session.

Resource Minister Crerar in- rmed the house that it may be ly a few years until parliament ust decide whether to give repre- ntation to the people of the Ter- tories. Paul Martin (Lib. Essex st) had queried the minister on e issue but the Alberta Conser- tive association was the first to ing the matter to the attention the public. The association said e matter of representation would pressed.

XPECTS POPULATION

Mr. Crerar was enthusiastic out the prospect in the Terri- ries and said he expected a big flux of population within a few ars. His department was already ving more attention to that part the Dominion.

Exploits of the Russian polar avi- ors flying over the top of the orld and crossing the Territories two flights from Moscow to the nited States as well as the last nsuccessful flight which ended in saster had drawn attention of the orld to the Territories.

WEEDSMUIR'S TRIP

Lord Tweedsmuir's trip last sum- er to Aklavik at the mouth of e Mackenzie river removed some f the mystery surrounding the ountry and presented it as a po- ntially wealthy section of the na- on.

The area is administered by the erritorial council with headquar- ers at Ottawa composed of ex- erts schooled in the needs and ossibilities of the northland. The ouncil acts under the Dominion epartment of mines and resources nd the council head is Dr. Charles amsell, deputy minister of the de- artment. Keeping Abreast of Latest Developments In the Swiftly Moving Sino-Japanese War

Nine months of bitter warfare, which have left a trail of more than a million dead and wounded, finds China today in this situation:

The Japanese invaders have spread west and south from captured Peiping until they hold all the key cities of Chahar and Suiyuan provinces to the westward, and most of Shantung, Shansi and Hopeh provinces to the south.

Large Chinese forces are fighting desperately to halt the southward advance along the line of the Lung Hai railroad, China's principal east-west artery.

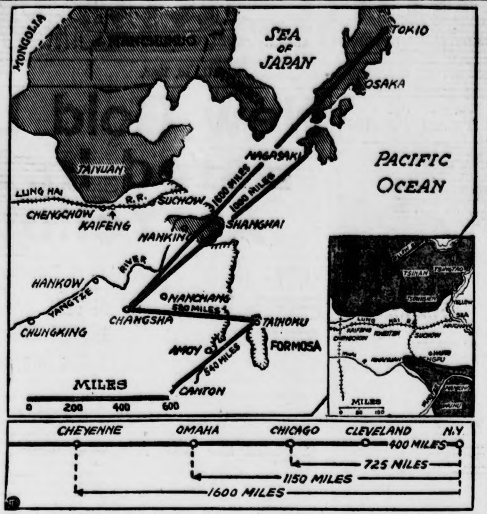
Meanwhile the southern army, having taken Shanghai and Nanking, has pressed some 350 miles northwest, constantly closing the gap between the northern and southern Japanese armies. Chinese resistance against the nutcracker attack in this area has been bitter and featured by counter-attacks which have held back or nullified all Japanese advances for several weeks.

More than 10,000,000 civilian refugees have streamed into the interior from the areas occupied by the Japanese armies and millions of them are near starvation.

Forced back upon the Yangtze river, the Chinese have established their new capital at Chungking, far inland.

Chinese air raids on Japanese Formosa have come either from Changsha, Nanchang, or Canton, at all of which places the Chinese have strong air bases. They may also have similar bases at Amoy and Foochow, much nearer Formosa. Japan is making interior preparations to ward off possible Chinese bombing raids on other Nipponese cities.

Communist Chinese troops recapturing some of the lost territory in Shansi, guerrillas harassing the Japanese near Peiping, and determined resistance of another Chinese army south of Wuhu in the Shanghai area, are all secondary to the fate of the 400,000 Chinese troops now between the Japanese northern and southern armies.



The war zones in China after nine months' fighting are shown in the large map above. Chinese territory occupied by the Japanese is shown in the shaded portions. Recent bombing of Formosa by the Chinese has alarmed Japan, and the map shows that Nippon has a reason to be apprehensive. The approximate distances from Chinese air bases to Japanese centres are comparatively short hops for modern bombing planes. The panel below the map shows comparable distance in Canada where airplanes can make the trip from Ottawa to Vancouver. The smaller map, inset at right, shows in greater detail the crucial battleground between the northern and southern Japanese armies, where 400,000 Chinese troops are making a desperate stand that has temporarily halted the Japanese advance.

de la Plana and Tarragona provinces.

General Francisco Franco's hopes of bringing a quick end to the 21-month long civil war soared as General Aranda's crack troops hurdled the last six miles separating them from the vital Barcelona-Valencia highway.

Severely handicapped by inferior equipment, government troops evacuated the coastal cities of Vinaroz and Benicarlo without a pitched battle. They attempted to cover their retreat with the few tanks at their disposal.

Miaja Becomes Spain Militia Head

MADRID, April 16 — General Jose Miaja became the supreme head of military and civilian affairs today in the southern four-fifths of government Spain, cut off from Catalonia by the Insurgents' break through to the sea of Vinaroz.

The bald, bespectacled "Savior of Madrid," most famous of the few army officers who have remained loyal to the government, was vested with the highest powers several days ago by Premier Juan Negrin. The appointment was confirmed on the radio last night.

For weeks the government has been sending essential supplies into the Madrid area in expectation of its territory being split asunder. Troops were said to be supplied and munitioned to carry on the fight for several months on central and southern battle fronts.

General Miaja, in assuming power, seemed the calmest of any official in Madrid, terming the Vinaroz defeat as just another episode of the war.

It was estimated approximately 10,000,000 persons live in the part of government Spain under General Miaja.

Catalonia, the other section of government Spain, has a population in excess of 2,000,000.

Insurgents Plant Banners At Coast

HENDAYE, France, April 16 — General Franco's Insurgents, their red and gold banners planted in the sands of the Mediterranean shore, pushed relentlessly northward along the coast today.

Their strategy was to cross the Ebro river and take Tortosa from the east, since their columns have been blocked for days in the approach from the west.

Desperate bands of Government militia sought to block the path of the Insurgents. Government aviators bombed towns freshly fallen to the Insurgents.

Triple Trouser Scheme Fails To Foil Stickups

HAVANA, O., April 16—Ever since 65-year-old John Robinson was robbed a year ago he wore three pairs of pants when he carried much money.

Even those failed him yesterday. Three "women" grabbed him in his yard, cut with scissors through his two outer pairs of trousers and took his wallet, containing $80.

Police suspected the trio was the same which robbed Robinson last year and hinted that the "women" might be males in disguise.

tative Giornale d'Italia declared: "Italian policy is not accustomed to change according to the whims of the season. It continued then the course fixed by the keystone of the Rome-Berlin axis."

PEOPLE REJOICE

The rank and file of Italians rejoiced at the promised end of estrangements which had tended to divide Europe's great democracies and totalitarian states into hostile camps. They were heartened by the prospect of a return of tourist traffic and trade relations crippled by war scares and press polemics.

Il Popolo Do Roma noted the coincidence of the signing with Easter and said: "By a singular coincidence this is the second Easter wherein the Fascist government signs accords of fundamental importance for the peaceful systematization of its foreign relations: last year with Yugoslavia, today with England."

Japan has 370,123 trade unionists in her 768 trade unions, 101 of which unions are in the transport industry.

JAP DEFENCES HARD HIT BY SINO ADVANCE

Recapture of Yihsien Now Seems Certain—Parade Is Held

SHANGHAI, April 16.—Chinese asserted today their army in southern Shantung province had smashed Japanese defences on three sides of Yihsien and that recapture of the battered city was certain.

This report came as Chinese still celebrated their victory at Taierhchwang, 20 miles away, where foreign military experts estimated 7,000 to 10,000 Japanese were killed and 20,000 wounded.

At Suchow, goal of the Japanese drive in central China, the Chinese ended a three-day celebration with a lantern parade and a display of captured Japanese war machinery.

In Tokyo, Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye was said to be ready to resign because of a split among his ministers over conduct of the war in China. The issue was said to be whether Japan should mobilize her full military strength in an effort to achieve a quick and final victory.

The army and navy were reported strongly opposed to any cabinet resignation at this time, fearing the effect upon troops now in China.

The Japanese army spokesman in Shanghai refused to deny or confirm the conclusion of neutral observers that Japan suffered its first major defeat in modern times in the battle of Taierhchwang.

Panties Of 1898 Model Uncovered In Town Vault

WAKEFIELD, Mass., April 12.—Town Clerk Frederick S. Hartshone, trembling with anticipation, today opened a forgotten drawer of the town vault and withdrew from it a package that had gone unnoticed since the last generation.

The package was addressed from a New York sample house to a man that had been dead several years.

The clerk found one pair of lady's white lace panties, 1898 model; a corset with pink lace ruffles, and a white-ruffled petticoat.

ROYAL GROUP PROBES PROVE OTTAWA PROFIT

textile commission's investigation that action was instituted aimed to return more than $2,000,000 to the public treasury. If successful, the probe by this royal commission will have saved the government more than twice the cost of all royal commissions and other investigating bodies combined since October, 1935. The textile commission uncovered huge reserves of some of the companies alleged not to have been properly accounted for in their income tax and war profits tax returns.

INCOME TAX

The income tax branch at once took up the matter, sifted all the evidence and filed claims for the balances due against the companies. They appealed to the minister under the regular procedure. The income tax claims were confirmed and the companies are now appealing to the exchequer court of Canada. From time to time since December last, these claims have been coming into the court until the total claimed by the income tax authorities in balances due with interest runs more than $2,000,000.

It is these actions to which Mr. Justice Turgeon refers in the textile commission report when he said: "It was asserted that by means in some cases of secret inventory reserves, and in other cases of improper charges to operations, for depreciation, betterments, etc., the true profits were hidden away and not accounted for, for instance, to the income tax authorities. After hearing what was said on the subject, I concluded that the evidence necessitated further action and I referred the matters in question to the income tax office."

States and Mexico. For several years Mr. Evans was chief engineer of the Moctezuma Copper Co., a subsidiary of the Phelps Dodge Mining Co., and was also associated with several other large concerns in which ex-President Herbert Hoover was interested.

Twenty-eight claims have already been staked in the new area for the Ryan Exploration and Development Co., Ltd., and eighteen more claims in the same area are held under option.

Thirteen of the claims are in the P.R.W. group and eight in the Ann group, one miles west of Walsh lake, scene of a number of high grade strikes. Another group of three claims are known as the Lucky Jim, and are located on the south side of Walsh lake about one mile east of the P.R.W. claims.

MIK GROUP LOCATED

The Mik group of four claims is on the northwest shore of Yellowknife bay near the east boundary of the Giant claims now being developed by the Anglo-Huron interests.

The 18 claims under option are the Jack Pot group in the new fields approximately 40 miles north of Yellowknife. Sensational discoveries were recently made by the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., Ltd., on the Mon group in this area. The Jack Pot claims adjoin the Mon claims on the north and are also in close proximity to rich claims now being developed by the Territories Exporation Co., Ltd.

Three large scale mining companies are developing claims in this area, the Negus group of the Joe Errington interests also being developed in addition to the work being done by the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., Ltd., and the Territories Exploration Co.

"Development work will be pushed ahead rapidly this year under Mr. Evans," said Mickey Ryan today. "All assessment work has been completed to date and we believe we have one of the best mines in the Yellowknife area.

It is the intention of the Ryan Brothers and Tom Payne to proceed as they did with the Ryan mine, and only a small issue of shares will be offered their friends to enable diamond drilling and other work to be carried on to prove up the extent of their holdings and the value of the mine.

This was the procedure followed when the Ryan mines were floated, only 100,000 shares at 50c being offered for subscription which was entirely taken up by their friends.

"We don't want any public money going into any of our mines till we know what we've got. All we want to do is to develop this new property as we did the Ryan mines and then we will know what we have to sell and what it is worth. We're not promoters but developers," said Mickey Ryan today in outlining his plans for the new company.

Buyers of the 50c shares in Ryan Mines Lt. were richly rewarded for their faith when the deal with Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., Ltd., was made.

General Chiang Kai-Shek's commanders declared fall of the city was certain, as all its supply lines were cut. A considerable part of the town was in flames.

From foreign sources it was learned another Japanese force which had fought its way northward toward the east end of the Lunghai railway had met a serious reverse at Wuyu in Kiangsu province.

The Japanese infantry vanguard, it was reported, outdistanced its supporting artillery and was ambushed.

Sustaining severe casualties, the Japanese were forced to fall back and dig in for defence.

000 of gold—about half the gold in the world.

About $5,000,000,000 of the metal is in a new subterranean vault at Fort Knox, Ky., and the remainder is scattered among the federal reserve banks and federal mints.

Before Dec. 24, 1936, whenever the treasury bought gold, it paid for it by printing currency backed by the metal. It is illegal for the metal itself to circulate as money. The gold-selling foreigner thus got dollars which he deposited in a bank, and the bank could lend the dollars out the same as any other deposits.

But near the end of 1936, prices of commodities began rising swiftly, the fiscal officials decided that continued expansion of the banks' lendable funds might facilitate an unhealthy credit boom.

GOLD REINACTIVATED

They decided to "sterilize" or render reinactive the incoming gold. They borrowed money to pay for incoming gold instead of making the metal the basis for new currency. The borrowing took money out of the banks as fast as foreigners put it in, thus preventing expansion of the credit base.

On Sept. 14, 1937, after the recession had begun and the reverse of a credit boom was faced, the treasury "desterilized" or activated $300,000,000 of the idle gold by depositing certificates for that amount with the federal reserve.

On Feb. 14, 1938, it halted sterilization of new gold inflows, and yesterday it desterilized the remaining idle metal.

The gold now will do the same thing it would have done before the days of sterilization. Instead of the foreigner putting money in a bank, however, the treasury will spend the money, and either the recipients of federal cheques or the neighborhood grocer who cashes their cheques will put the money in a bank.

The first thing, for instance, that the treasury did after desterilization was to cancel a proposed $60,000,000 withdrawal of deposits from banks to meet current expenses. From now on the gold credit can be used either for current expenses or temporarily to reduce the public debt.

FOUR KIDDIES LOSE LIVES IN LEAKING CRAFT

out to the rescue in a commandeered canoe. John, elder of the two, jumped fully clothed into the chilly water and attempted to gather as many as he could of the screaming children into his arms while George aided from the canoe.

At that moment the canoe upset. George Dinwoodie was thrown into the water, deep at the spot where the tragedy occurred, but was rescued by Charles Delongchamp and Ernest Brisebois, who had commandeered another canoe. Meanwhile, the bodies of the four children and John Dinwoodie had sunk. Rene Ross and Damas Spencer were taken to shore and efforts to recover the bodies were begun.

DISOBEYED PARENTS

The six children left their homes for Minnow lake, on the outskirts of Sudbury, despite, police said, the protests of their parents. The boys came across Ernest Brisebois' boat, without oars or paddles, and set out for a raft about 300 yards from shore. Pieces of boards and a stick were used as paddles.

Witnesses said the little raft had gone only a short distance from shore when the boys apparently noticed it was leaking and became panic stricken. They appeared uncertain whether to continue paddling to the raft, still 150 yards away, make an attempt to reach shore or to get onto nearby ice which now is breaking up on the lake.

John Dinwoodie was a truck driver. With his brother, he was passing the scene at the time of the accident and was appealed to by residents to obtain a rescue boat.

don our purposes of building a greater, a more stable and a more tolerant America, would be to miss the tide and perhaps the port. I propose to sail ahead. I feel sure that your hopes and your help are with me. For to reach a port, we must sail—sail, not lie at anchor, sail, not drift."

There can be little doubt the White House expects to carry on throughout the primary and congressional and state campaigning this year in an effort to make the president and his leadership the issue in the minds of the voters.

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Mr. Roosevelt risks much in centering, or attempting to centre congressional and state political battles upon himself and his policies. He is virtually demanding a national vote of confidence midway of his second term, when presidential prestige normally falls lowest under the no-third-term tradition.

There is no widespread opposition in congress to larger relief outlays, whatever dispute over control and method of distribution there may be. The gold desertilization required only a presidential go-signal to make it a fact.

On the basis of first congressional reaction to the new recovery program, there is not much that congress, even that portion of it fighting against Roosevelt leadership and policies, can do about it. Most congressmen would consider it risky in an election year to vote against relied or against the hopes of reemployment created in the public mind by the president's method of laying the case before the nation.

ESSAY CONTEST WINNER FOUND BY NEWSPAPERS

LONDON, April 16.—The winner of one of the prizes in the Empire essay contest arranged by the National Council of Education for Canada has been found.

Ida M. Jacobs of Pontadâwe, Swansea, is the writer who forgot to sign her name to the manuscript she sent in describing the youth rally in Albert Hall last May and her ideas for an Empire youth movement.

Alfred Noyes, the famous poet, and one of the judges of the 500 essays that came from all over the world, was so taken with Ida's effort he awarded a prize for the essay provided the author could be found.

The Daily Express and other London papers printed a facsimile of several lines from the composition and excerpts were sent to the various dominions. Ida recognized her handwriting and wrote claiming the prize—an autographed copy of Mr. Noyes' works.

MAORI WARRIORS STAGE DANCE IN FAREWELL FETE

AUCKLAND, N.Z., April 16.—A war dance staged in the ship's main lounge by Maori warriors was New Zealand's farewell to the world cruise liner Empress of Britain when she sailed last night for Fiji, continuing her round the world cruise that has included a visit to Australia and New Zealand for the first time in Canadian Pacific cruise history.

The Empress of Britain's visit has been one of the biggest events in recent years in New Zealand shipping news, huge crowds welcomed the big Canadian liner when she reached Wellington on April 10 and the multitude which turned out to see her arrive in this port on Wednesday was the largest seen at the waterfront for many years.

A send-off of equal warmth was given the Canadian liner Friday evening by a big holiday crowd. After visiting Fiji, the Empress will head for Honolulu and San Francisco, where she is due on April 30.

INQUIRY INTO RAIL PROBLEM OPENS MAY 4

Special Senate Committee Will Have Wealth Of Information

OTTAWA, April 16.—The special senate committee which on May 4 will start an investigation to find out what can be done to deal with Canada's railway problem will have before it a wealth of information about the experiences of the United Kingdom.

It will also have the proposals of the Interstate Commission of the United States advanced to meet the transportation difficulties in that country.

At the organization meeting of the senate committee held before the parliamentary recess, O. M. Biggar, counsel for the probe, was asked to prepare an agenda and provide data on the methods adopted in Great Britain to meet the situation when the railways got into difficulties. Consolidation of the railway services there took place in 1922, so there is 15 years experience on how it is working out.

SERVICES DIVIDED

In Britain, all the railway services were divided into four groups and in each group the services were pooled and consolidated. However, most of the large centres of population were served by two or more groups as such centres still had the advantage of inter-group competition.

Accordingly, it would be somesomewhat different from any consolidation of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways suggested as a way to reduce railway losses in Canada.

REGULATE COMPETITION

Another dvantage in dealing with the British situation is that the United Kingdom government has authority over highway as well as rail transportation. It has been able to regulate motor competition and the railways compete in the highway traffic with their own trucks and buses operated in conjunction with their rail services.

The committee plans to start its investigations where the Duff Railway Commission left off in its 1932 probe. That inquiry was based largely on the railway figures of 1930.

JOINT COMMITTEE

After the 1933 Act passed in parliament designed to accomplish greater co-operation between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific, managements of the two systems set up a joint cooperative committee of six officials, three from each system, to canvass the possibilities for economies by pooling and consolidating services.

GEN. KAI-SHEK SAID WOUNDED BY JAP BOMB

TOKYO, April 16. — A foreign spokesman today said "fairly reliable sources" had reported that China's general Chiang Kai-Shek, was wounded in both legs and that T. V. Soong, his brother-in-law and head of the Chinese airforce, was hit in the stomach and arms when Japanese bombed Changsha April 10.

A Chinese spokesman at Hankow, temporary China capital, on April 12 denied emphatically Japanese reports that Chiang and Soong had been killed during the Changsa raid.

The general, the spokesman said, was busily engaged at Hankow headquarters, while Soong was occupied with official duities in Hong Kong. Neither, he continued, had visited Changsha for a long time.

ROOSEVELT IS FINDING CASH FOR RECOVERY

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The Roosevelt administration determined today to take a slice of public jobholders' salaries and income from future United States government securities to help pay for its proposed $4,500,000,000 program of lending and spending to combat the depression.

President Roosevelt disclosed at a press conference he would send these taxation proposals to congress, along with recommendations for strengthening the laws against monopoly.

The tax proposal involves the removal of tax exemptions from all future issues of government securities—federal, state, municipal, etc. The federal government, which taxes salaries of its own employees now, would levy upon salaries of employees of other governmental agencies. States, in turn, would be expected to tax federal salaries.

Roswell Magill, undersecretary of the treasury, recently figured the government could garner a total of $155,000,000 annually if all existing federal, state and local securities and salaries were subject to tax.

Ice Is Broken In Saskatchewan At Prince Albert

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., April 16.—The North Saskatchewan river here went out Friday. Although the ice had not commenced to move freely, large blocks were still intact, but the river was flowing through an ice-free channel. The river went out April 16 last year.

The recently completed $140,000 submerged weir, built three miles down river to permanently keep the river at a safe level for airplane landings and take offs, successfully met its first break-up test

The liberated river was flowing freely over the weir except for a portion in the centre. The apex of a great triangle of ice which stretches above the weir for more than a mile and had shown no sign of moving.

DUGGAN SAYS SOCRED DREAM FAR-REACHING

Tells Calgary Meeting Aberhart Plans to Capture Saskatchewan

CALGARY, April 16.—Present "dream" of the Alberta Social Credit movement was to make Premier William Aberhart premier of a Saskatchewan Social Credit government and later to make him a sort of "generalissimo" of the three prairie provinces, D. M Duggan, M.L.A., Alberta Conservative leader, told a meeting of the Calgary Conservative association Thursday night.

The Aberhart government planned to capture Saskatchewan in the forthcoming provincial elections, Mr. Duggan said. Then Hon. E. C. Manning, Alberta's provincial secretary, would be made premier of Alberta while Mr. Aberhart assumed the premiership of Saskatchewan. Then Manitoba was to be captured in the next provincial elections, and Premier Aberhart would be placed over the three prairie provinces.

EXPECTS ELECTION

Mr. Duggan thought that if Social Credit succeeded in Saskatchewan an election could be expected in Alberta in the fall of the present year.

He charged that Premier Aberhart was no longer the real head of the government in Alberta. The government was vested in the Social Credit board which obeyed the directions of Major C. H. Douglas, British engineer and founder of the movement, whose hand was apparent in all the major legislation passed since the board was established, Mr. Duggan contended.

Unless the people awoke to the danger of this system and decided upon united political action, prospects for the future were very disheartening, he declared.

URGES CO-OPERATION

He felt certain that if an election were called only the closest cooperation among all parties opposed to the Aberhart government held any hope of defeating it.

FOREST FIRE LOSS TOTALS $48,000,000

OTTAWA, April 16.—In an appeal for forest fire prevention, the mines and resources department said Friday that forest fires in Canada during the last 10 years caused a direct loss of more than $48,000,000.

"This does not tell the whole story," the department added, "as it is impossible to estimate in dollars and cents the indirect losses in soil fertility, scenic value, damage caused by floods, soil erosion and lowering of water levels, all of which are the inevitable results of extreme denudation."

GRAIN EXPORT TARIFF CHANGE HITS MONTREAL

MONTREAL, April 16.—The Gazette says today it has learned "action of the National Harbors Board in changing the tariff on grain exports through Montreal has resulted in withdrawal of all offers abroad on shipments through this port."

"Sellers of grain have made no offers abroad in the past two days because of the change and are strongly protesting against the new tariff, which will impose a charge of $4 per 1,000 bushels on owners of grain for outboard elevation in Montreal, a cost formerly borne by the ocean carriers.

"Similar protests have been voiced by the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and the North American Export Association in New York."

Many A Man
Has escaped a nervous breakdown

It is now becoming generally known, by word of mouth from one person to another, that scores of nervous, worried business men attribute their escape from nervous collapse to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Business cares and worries of recent years have made men old before their time. Almost daily you read of prominent men dropping out in the very prime of life.

Others have survived, because they learned in time of a way to restore nerve force to the body. As a result, weak, halting vital organs have again assumed their natural functions. Rest and sleep have become possible, and mind and body have been restored to normal. If you find yourself slipping ask your friends about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. In almost every family there is some one who has profited by use of this modern restorative.

Special Announcement:
"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs"

It is rumored that children may not see SNOW WHITE without being accompanied by parents. Manager Wilson wishes to correct this, for SNOW WHITE is a "PASSED U" picture, meaning that children can attend this show alone.

However, only babies in arms will be admitted free of charge. All others must have tickets. The children's price is 15 cents including tax for the morning shows only. There will be two shows on Easter Monday morning, the first commencing at 8:30, and the second at 10:30. Other days during the week, the morning show will commence at 10 o'clock, with the doors opening at 9:30.

After the early shows, the price of admission for children will be 25 cents including tax. Adults' price for morning shows will be 27 cents including tax, with holiday prices prevailing on Monday only.

To assist the doormen, patrons are advised to carry their own tickets.

The first thousand children entering the theatre on Monday and Tuesday mornings will be presented with a colored picture of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. xxx

SATURDAY, APRIL 16, 1938

Easter

The name is derived from the Anglo-Saxon Eostre, a goddess of light or spring, in honor of whom our pagan forefathers held a festival in the time-period now called April.

But Easter does not always fall in April. Last year it occurred on March 28th. It is a movable feast, observed on the first Sunday following the first full moon after the 21st of March. The full moon occurred on Thursday of this week; tomorrow is therefore Easter.

Attempts have been made to set a fixed date or day on which Easter should be celebrated in every year, without success. Ten years ago the parliament of Great Britain passed an act naming the Sunday following the second Saturday in April as Easter, conditional upon similar action being taken by other countries. Such action has not been taken, and Easter remains a variable anniversary.

The festival does not of course derive from the same source as the name. It is a continuance of the Jewish Passover, also celebrated at this time of the year. The early Christians continued to celebrate the Passover, but associated it with the resurrection of Jesus Christ, to them the Paschal Lamb sacrificed for the sins of the world.

Easter therefore comes down to us freighted with both Christian and pagan associations. To the devout Christian it commemorates the fact that Christ rose from the dead, the assurance and the symbol that His followers also shall live again. And to all it is a time for rejoicing in the re-awakening of nature from the "death" of winter.

Regimented For Conquest

Canadians are in fairly general agreement that should the country be again involved in war the Government should have power to conscript everybody and everybody's property. Many will therefore note with keener interest that the Government of Japan has just acquired this universal conscripting power through the enactment of a national mobilization bill. From the least to the greatest every Japanese citizen and all he owns is now at the instant and absolute disposal of the cabinet. And as a first application of the measure he is to supply $1,400,000,000 to meet the expense of beating the life out of China.

That does not invalidate the principle that the national effort in time of danger should be able to employ the entire resources of the nation, human and material. But it does raise the point that the popularity of this policy depends on the kind of government a country has and the end to which the national effort is being directed. Millions of Japanese will not like being dispossessed, and bossed around by conscription officers military and civilian. Not because they are lacking in patriotism but because they are opposed to the policy of conquest. Canadians would not like the policy either, under those circumstances.

But that is exactly the policy we should get, if Canada were to fall under Fascist control, as a good many are now predicting. The Japanese are now in the same position as the people of Germany, Italy and Russia. They have no rights and only such privileges as their war-making masters may choose to allow them.

Hitler And Austria

Stirred into exultant candor by the success of his Austrian coup, Hitler has confessed that the result of the triumphant plebiscite marks the happiest hour of his life. He forgets that the vote was taken under compulsion, with death or social ostracism the penalty for disapproval of his "coup".

But it is clear now just how great was the pressure which finally drove careworn Schuschnigg to consent to make Austria a province of Germany. That story has been told on high authority and with sickening realism by the deposed chancellor's adviser, Rene Kraus.

On March 6, Schuschnigg pleaded with Britain, France and Italy for aid against Hitler's aggression. He was left alone. The pigmy state of Austria was to be crushed by the might of her ruthless neighbor. The Austrian cabinet, more brave than prudent, counselled single-handed resistance. Torn by an agony of doubt, the chancellor wavered ere choosing between submission and war.

Suddenly, according to Kraus, the phone rang and the insistent voice of Hitler demanded to speak with Schuschnigg. The command from Berlin was that the Austrian plebiscite should not take place. Disobedience meant war. And the chancellor was to return an answer to Hitler within the hour. Droning German planes flying low over Austria already gave tragic and terrifying emphasis to the ultimatum.

Twice Schuschnigg offered the Austrian cabinet his resignation, and twice it was spurned by the patriotic council. Ten minutes before the hour was up, Hitler again phoned, warning him that war was only a few minutes away unless he yielded to the persuasion of irresistible force. Loving Austria more than he hated Hitler, cherishing the lives of his countrymen as a more precious trust than the political independence of his isolated country, Schuschnigg at length yielded. Austria became a memory.

"This is a true story," Kraus swears. It will be remembered long after the success of Hitler's sham "plebiscite" has been forgotten. That vote is a monument to the trickery and threats by which a ward of the League of Nations was robbed of the right to make a free choice as to its destiny.

Editorial Notes

Not many years have passed since one of the Wright brothers amazed the world by saying: "You could fly on a kitchen table if you could go fast enough." Now a pilot of the Royal Air Force has "looped the loop" 147 times in a glider—an airplane with no engine. Even the Wrights can hardly have expected that to happen.

Premier Mussolini extends a welcome in advance to Mr. Leslie Hore-Belisha, Britain's war minister. If the welcome when he arrives is not positively effusive it will at least be warmer than it would have been a month ago. For the reason, among others, that Hitler now holds the Brenner Pass.

People living in Paris are to get presents, each one a nice new Government-supplied gas mask. That shows how much faith the authorities have in the new deals being made with Italy and Germany. The modern European version of the old adage is: Trust in appeasement but keep your gas mask handy.

Referring to the early days of the Great War, after the Canadian troops had first met the test of battle, a Calgary colonel informed the local Military Institute he can imagine Sir John French saying to his staff in the idiom of today: "Those fellows have what it takes." The Kaiser's appropriate retort would be: "You're telling me".

Czechoslovakia

By and large, the civil policy of Czechoslovakia regarding minorities has been relatively advanced. Those who think it falls short of the idea judge it by a standard not recognized in practice elsewhere. True, Czechoslovakia has not seen fit to grant the Germanic districts autonomy. On the other hand, the Sudetic Germans are represented in Parliament and in the cabinet. . . .

Czechoslovakia also recognizes the cherished right of the minority to instruct in its own tongue. Primary schools in Czechoslovakia falls into two categories: Volksschulen for children under eleven years of age, and Buergerschulen for children from eleven to fourteen years of age.

According to a school census of October 31, 1935, 21.6 per cent of the former and 22.5 per cent of the latter gave instruction in German. Germanic pupils formed one per cent of the enrolment of the Buergerschulen, where instruction was given in Czechoslovakia; Czechs and Slovaks formed six-tenths of one per cent in the Volksschulen and three per cent in the Buergerschulen, where instruction was given in German.

This record contrasts favorably with past and present practices of some of Czechoslovakia's neighbors.—Yale Review.

Good News From The West

Good news comes from the west. The drought area, or most of it, has an ample supply of spring moisture. The snowfall was heavy. Sloughs are filled. Water is pouring down long-dry creek beds, even washing out conservation dams. Lakes, long eyesores of glistening white alkali, are filling up with water again. The moisture has gone deep into the ground, giving at least some reserves against the summer suns and winds. On top of the good snowfall has come an exceptionally early and heavy spring rain, falling on soft ground from which the frost has gone.

It would be easy to become too optimistic regarding these facts. They do not by any means guarantee good crops. They do, however, start off the crop season with much better prospects than have existed for the seven years of drought. They offer some guarantee at least that the drought has broken, that there will be some reserves of moisture in the ground when the hot winds come, that the crops will not be as wholly dependent on the timeliness of the June rains.

What they should mean to the West, above everything else, is, that the opportunity for effective conservation work has arrived. There is moisture to be conserved, even in the heart of the dryest areas. No farm need be without at least a sufficient reservoir of water to provide for livestock and for a vegetable garden.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Colorful Clothes For Men

In the political world the tendency seems toward dragooning thought and action into conforming standard patterns, but the fashion dictators this spring believe in unlimited individuality and unorthodoxy. Fling away, they say, all preconceived and old ideas of this color matching that and no other. Experiment and mix in all possible directions, mauves with yellows, blues with greens, and the widest latitude in the mixing. But beware! For if color upon color be not with "cunning hand laid on," far better were it to remain conservative in greeting the spring, and flaunt the fashions of summer with reserve.

However, if caution may be recommended to the gentler sex, remembering that Dame Fashion will judge this newly allowed experimentation on all the subtleties of shade and tone in the textile palette, let it be otherwise with the men. They should be bolder. There are more than blues and green for them to choose from, and not only in shirts and ties.

The designers of men's fashions are, apparently, succeeding in bringing color, as Nature intended into male attire. This new freedom for men opens up vast possibilities. So let them seize their opportunities, and, no longer drably attired, give a heil to this dictation of fashion. —Ottawa Citizen.

The Real "Road Tax"

It was set forth in the brief presented to the Rowell Commission by the Provincial Government, that British Columbia spent $11,500,000 last year in the purchase of automobiles.

An examination of the last issue of Public Accounts shows that, for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1937, the British Columbia Government collected $2,627,000 in fees for registering motor cars, for the annual motor license and for drivers' licenses.

In the same year, the gasoline tax amounted to $2,720,000, indicating that a tax was paid on nearly 40,000,000 gallons of gasoline Including the tax, motorists must have paid about $11,000,000 for this gasoline.

The British Columbia superintendent of insurance has just released figures showing that, last year, British Columbia motorists paid $2,044,607 for automobile insurance.

It makes a pretty showing altogether, $11,500,000 for new cars, $11,000,000 for gasoline, $2,627,000 for fees and $2,045,000 for insurance, or a total of $27,272,000 outgo for motorists, and this does not take into account anything for service, parking or oil. In all, it is safe to say, British Columbia pays as much in twelve months to keep its motor cars on the road as it does to keep its government going.—Vancouver Province.

Just Ignore It?

The Economist, in an article recently reproduced in these columns said that Mr. Chamberlain's Spanish policy passes understanding; but it is crystal clear in comparison with the line of argument put out by the British Government in support of its policy of breaking up the League as an agency of common protection for its members. It was advanced, for the thousandth time, as an official defence for Britain's League policy by Lord Halifax last week. This apology for British policy was one of the inventions of the Cliveden group and was first given currency by Lord Lothian. It was taken over, as other policies fashioned in the same shop have been by the British Government, and is now the stereotyped defence for Great Britain's rejection of League obligations. The argument is set forth in some detail by Lord Halifax:

"It is plain truth that if we were to act as some would suggest and try to organize a new pattern of collective security against Germany by the present League powers, we should be doing the very thing that would not only, in the long view, be destructive of the hope of winning Germany, and the other powers who have left, back to European co-operation, possibly in some new form, but also we should be doing something against which we have already worked, namely the division of Europe into blocs, formally ranged against one another, which in our view must inevitably aggravate the risk of ultimate catastrophe."

This amounts to the assertion that if the League should function as it was the intention of its founders that it should function, it would divide Europe into two "blocs" and thus invite catastrophe. Let us assume for a moment the accuracy of the statement as to the existence of the "blocs" and see what it amounts to. One "bloc," comprising Germany and Italy, is openly embarked upon programs of conquest by violence looking to domination, between them, of Europe and the Mediterranean. He is blind, indeed, who does not by now realize that this is the immediate purpose of these allies; their legions are already on the march. This "bloc" is in being and in action. Its existence does not need to be revealed to the world by the existence of another "bloc," though this is the reason given why the second "bloc" should be destroyed. If nothing is done to draw attention to the Rome-Berlin axis, it does not exist: this seems to be the bright idea behind the argument. —Winnipeg Free Press.

Your Health

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Low blood pressure may exist without the presence of any definite disease, seeming to be the outcome of a state of general weakness. In such cases, the cure consists of building up a good quality of blood and developing the body as a whole. The weakness must be overcome by the use of physical culture exercises and walking.

Improvement is slow and the patient must be persistent in his efforts to raise the blood pressure if any lasting effect is to be produced.

Even though the vitality of the patient with low blood pressure seems to be low, the best plan is to start by an eliminative treatment which will rid the body of all accumulated wastes. I find the quickest elimination is secured by taking the fast as all of the eliminative organs will be speeded up when the patient is not eating. Energy formerly devoted to the digestion of food then becomes available for processes of elimination. During the fast, the skin should be stimulated to throw out more impurities by frequent shower or sponge baths, and a good intestinal elimination is secured by the daily enema.

A five day fast is usually of the right length in these low blood pressure patients, who may complain of headaches or weakness the first day or two, but generally note a return of strength by the time they are ready to start eating.

Following the fast the patient needs a well-balanced diet which will supply only that amount of food which the body really needs. Over-eating or stuffing is best avoided. The patient will usually do best on a diet which provides raw and cooked vegetables in abundance, together with eggs, a sensible amount of meat, and stewed dried fruits. Fresh fruit juices are of value but should be considered more in the light of a dietary supplement, being used in addition to three well-balanced meals daily. The fruit juices are beneficial because of the minerals and vitamins they provide and may be taken either early in the morning before breakfast, during the middle of the afternoon, or last thing at night before retiring. Milk is sometimes very helpful to low blood pressure patients but when added to the diet should be treated as a real food and not considered as a drink having little or no food value.

The one point necessary to keep ever in mind is the necessity of developing increased strength. Nothing seems as beneficial as long walks for this purpose. I do not know of any other treatment or exercise which will have the same definite effect as walking for developing a better blood pressure.

In addition to the walking, the patient should take physical culture exercise each day, starting with the light exercises and gradually increasing the number of movements until an increase in strength is noted.

The patient with low blood pressure should also practice deep breathing exercises while using other measures to bring the blood pressure back up to normal. Even though several weeks or months may be needed to bring the blood pressure up to 120, the patient will find that his efforts have been well worth while, for he will note a great improvement in strength and vitality as the blood pressure once more becomes normal.

You are welcome to send for my article on Low Blood Pressure which you will receive by writing to me, enclosing a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Questions And Answers

QUESTION—P. L. writes: "In case the body gets too much vitamin C, what does it do with the excess? Does a lack of the vitamin influence recovery in the case of a sick person?"

ANSWER: Studies made in Vienna indicate that when there is an over supply of vitamin C, the body eliminates the excess on the first day by way of the kidneys. In those patients having a low state of resistance, lack of vitamin C seems to play some part in influencing the length of time needed for recovering from various diseases, with a longer time being required than would be the case if an adequate amount of the vitamin was available to the organism.

QUESTION—E. B. inquires: "Should the kidney elimination from a healthy person be acid or alkaline? What is the alkaline tide?"

ANSWER: In the healthy human subject the liquid elimination from the kidneys normally is acid. However, diet is one of the principal factors influencing the urinary reaction. An exclusive protein diet or meat diet brings about an increase in acidity because of the fact that the meat yields acid end-products, whereas an exclusive vegetable diet generally produces an alkaline reaction. In testing the elimination it is advisable to test a specimen taken from a mixture of two or more voidings, several hours apart. The reason for this is that some variation takes place during the day, for example, the elimination is most acid early in the morning, and least acid after a meal. About two and one-half hours after a meal, the eliminations may be temporarily alkaline. The brief change in reaction has been called "the alkaline tide."

A Day in Canadian History

By FRED WILLIAMS

Today is the anniversary of three historic divisions in the House of Commons. Louis Riel, who had been elected for Provencher, Man., although a reward was on his head for the slaying of Thomas Scott, had reached Ottawa, called at the office of the clerk, signed the roll, taken the oath and then made a request for his mileage from Winnipeg, after which he had crossed the river to Hull and thence to hiding in Montreal.

Naturally there was trouble. The Orange Conservatives insisted that Riel be captured and put on trial. The Ontario Liberals could hardly oppose, since Edward Blake had, when premier of Ontario, carried a resolution through the legislature offering a reward of $5,000 for the capture of the slayers of Scott. On the other hand, the French members, especially the Liberals, favored amnesty for Riel.

Mackenzie Bowell, then grand master of the Orange order (but not a cabinet minister), moved, seconded by Dr. John Schultz (who had been one of Riel's captives at Fort Garry), that Riel be expelled from the House as a fugitive from justice. Luther Holton, an English Protestant from Quebec, seconded by Malcolm Cameron, from Ontario, moved in amendment that proceedings be suspended until the truth had been ascertained as to the amnesty which Sir John Macdonald was supposed to have promised Riel.

Then the Quebec Conservatives, led by J. A. Mousseau and L. G. Baby (both of them former Conservative cabinet ministers) offered a sub-amendment that a full and immediate amnesty be granted.

The issue cut across party lines. Members of the Mackenzie cabinet took opposite views. Ontario and Quebec lined up in more clear-cut opposition than ever before. Only one Ontario member voted against the motion for Riel's expulsion, which was carried by 123 to 68; Holton's amendment was lost, 76-117, and Mousseau's, supported only by Quebec Conservatives, by 27-164.

The debate was notable for the fact that it included the first speech in English by Wilfrid Laurier, then new to parliament. He had not attained the eloquence in English which marked his later years, but the speech much impressed the House, and the English-speaking members realized, as their confreres from Quebec had known before, that a great orator was in their midst, one who in years to come would sway the whole country with his eloquence in either language, and very often in both on the same platform.

Sunshine Shafts

At school for the first time, the small boy started to sob bitterly.

"What's the matter, Willie," asked the teacher.

"Please, Miss, I don't like school and I've got to stay here till I'm 14."

"Don't worry about that," said the teacher. "Look at me. I've to stay here till I'm 65."

A man went to sign on at the Labor Exchange, and the clerk asked him how he came out of work.

"Oh,' replied the man, 'Ah geet mad wi' t' boss."

"What for?" asked the clerk.

"Why," was the reply, "he said Ah'd stolen ten dollars."

"And why didn't you make him prove it?" persisted the clerk.

"He did prove it,' replied the man, "that's why Ah geet so mad."

There was a certain university professor who was very absent-minded. He was a very human professor, and liked to join his students in a game of cards. One evening he sat down with some of them for a game, and it was agreed that each player should start by putting a 10-shilling note in the "kitty." All did so with the exception of the professor.

Although he was known to be absent-minded the students were not going to let him get away with that and, not liking to tell him directly, they pretended to argue among themselves as to which of them had not paid his stake. The professor listened for a moment or two, then quickly withdrew one of the notes from the "kitty."

"If you young men are going to start quarrelling," he said, "I'm going to take my money back!"

A little girl had been to church for the first time. When she returned home her mother asked her what she thought of church

"I like it very much," she said, "but there was one thing I didn't think was fair."

"What was that, dear?" asked her mother.

"Why one man did all the work, and then another man came around and got all the money."

"Can you do double entry?" asked the employer of the prospective employee.

"I can do triple entry!" was the reply.

"Triple entry?"

"Yes—one entry for the working partner showing the true profits, another for the sleeping partner showing small profits, and a third for the income-tax collector showing a loss."

Old Country Letter

By J. E. NORCROSS

LONDON, Eng.—(By Mail)—The holidays-with-pay movement, begun only a year or two ago in serious earnest, has succeeded beyond the greatest expectations of its promoters.

J. E. Norcross

This summer 3,000,000 people will draw pay during their holidays for the first time in their lives.

In large part they will form an addition to the numbers who annually move to the seaside or other resorts for a week or more during the holiday season, and the railway companies, hoteliers and boarding-house keepers are confronted with a very serious problem.

According to the railway companies rail transportation reached the peak last year. No more trains to the resorts can be crowded into the time-table. There is a certain amount of elasticity about accommodation but if the great majority of people continue to take their holidays during the present short season accommodation and service are likely to be seriously overtaxed and prices to rise.

It is now proposed, therefore, that the holiday season should be extended and, in fact, so far as the preparations of the resorts are concerned, this is already going into effect. All resorts put on elaborate programs of amusement which, however, are not usually in full swing until July and terminate early in September, except at places like Blackpool, England's Atlantic City, gorgeous illuminations gain another few weeks.

This year some of the seaside places are announcing that their entertainment season will begin at Easter, April 15, and continue until mid-October, and most of them will not defer the opening beyond the end of May.

ALL this, however, will be ineffective unless there is a systematic staggering of school holidays and work-people's holidays, and efforts are now being made to this end. The educational bodies are said to agree in principle but certain examinations take place all over the country simultaneously and the curriculum has, perforce, to be adjusted to them.

The last word, however, probably rests with the large employers. If they decide to spread the holidays they are giving their employees over six months instead of two months, the schools will have to fall into line.

In any event, the coming season will be the longest and the most lucrative ever known to those who cater for holiday traffic in this country.

Historian Declares Second Great War Of 20th Century Now Is On

STRUGGLE NOW IS ON ASSERTS ARMS EXPERT

First Operations Occur When Il Duce Aids Spain With Planes

LONDON, April 16.—The second great war of the 20th century began in July, 1936, according to Captain Basil Liddell Hart, historian and expert on military matters.

Capt. Liddell Hart, who is military correspondent of The Times, told the University College Union society in London that the first operations of the war came when Italy with aircraft gave "direct assistance" to the Spanish insurgents and Germany with warships gave "indirect assistance," helping transport troops from Africa to Spain.

Preceding the war, he said, encouragement and experience had been gained by Japan in Manchuria and Italy in Ethiopia in defying the League of Nations and developing the new technique of camouflaged war.

WITHOUT BATTLE

"The situation in this new 'great war' now would seem to be that the enemy is within reach of gaining the decisive point without a battle, and in the most vital direction we have made no serious attempt to prevent him," said Capt. Liddell Hart.

Discussing episodes of the Great War 1914-18, he said Field Marshal Earl Haig was "an honorable man according to his lights — but his lights were dim."

The military writer said Haig's motive in the 1917 Passchendaele attack was a desire to win the war single-handed by a British offensive in Flanders, before the United States soldiers arrived.

WARNINGS IGNORED

"Haig ignored warning by the engineer staff that the Ypres area, being reclaimed marshland, would revert to swamp if the drainage system was destroyed by the necessary bombardment. He also ignored warnings by meteorological experts that in Flanders the weather regularly broke early in August.

"When his offensive was launched on the last day of July it failed completely on the part that was most vital . . . The offensive continued until 40,000 men had been sacrificed."

It's A Blonde: Not Humidity

DESMOINES, Ia., April 16—The weather bureau office here is having blonde trouble.

Charles D. Reed, government meteorologist, said a hygrothermograph, whose mechanism includes a hair from the head of a blonde woman, has been none too accurate.

He complained that science had found nothing more effective for measuring humidity than a blonde hair.

"This one is too fickle," Reed complained.

Major and Minor Notes

—By John Oliver—

Warm tribute is due to Alex Entwisle, pioneer Edmonton theatrical manager, for his personal enterprise in bringing to this city last week, the San Carlo Opera company, in a repertoire of four operas. At the time a wire came from the manager stating an engagement here could be considered, Mr. Entwisle was without, for the time being, the advice of his sons who are associated with him in the business. He had to make a decision "on the spot" all by himself. He took the chance and won.

* * *

Mr. Entwisle, speaking to this writer earlier this week, recounted how the telegram came and how it was essential to make an immediate decision. He was taking a big chance, as a large organization like the San Carlo company is an expensive one to book. The company, costumes, scenery, orchestra and other essentials necessary to a grand opera company are tremendous.

Primarily engaged in the picture business, Mr. Entwisle figured on providing highly worthwhile entertainment of an instructive nature and also felt that bringing the San Carlo forces here would prove a boost to the rest of the theatre business. It must have been most gratifying to him that the public turned out in such large numbers. Business was of the near-capacity type and both Mr. Entwisle and the San Carlo people were well pleased. Incidentally, Mr. Entwisle confided that business at the picture theatres took a boost at the same time—which is a good sign.

Admirers of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and its brilliant young conductor, John Barbirolli—and who is not an admirer?—are in for a genuine treat on Sunday when the CBC brings this magnificent organization in a program which will feature music from Wagner's music drama Parsifal. What a treat! Here will be the orchestra generally conceded to be the finest in the world, led by a brilliant conductor, playing the greatest music extant suitable for Eastertime.

Music will play an important hole in the commemoration of Easter in this city. All churches will have special music for Sunday, with several of the best known cantatas being sung, either in whole or in part. It is worthy of note that Stainer's Crucifixion, Maunder's Olivet to Calvary and Moor's The Darkest Hour retain their places as among most popular cantatas at this time of the year. Several churches featured music on Good Friday and large congregations attended.

* * *

Secretary Herbert G. Turner of the Alberta Musical Festival, reports a deep interest in the forthcoming festival—May 23 to 27. Calgary alone will be represented by about 400 contestants and the festival as a whole probably will have 2,000 competitors. From Calgary are coming two bands, the Calgary Native Boys' band and the Calgary School Boys' band. These two organizations will total about 190 players. The Westminsters Singers and the Calgary Gas Company chorus will both be here, totalling about 100 and the Junior Choral Society will compete with about 100 members. Then there will be many individual competitors, all of which will give Calgary a very fine representation. Entries have commenced flowing in and it would appear as though this year's festival would be among the most successful, in point of advance interest at least, that has yet been held.

Musical circles were depleted during the last week by the departure — temporarily — of John Bowman, popular violinist. He expects to be away for a couple of months or so. He has taken a motor trip east with his mother and after viewing the sights elsewhere, is expected to return.

At Christ church on Sunday, H. G. Turner, choirmaster, and L. F. Bazand, organist, will be in charge of the special music. Excerpts from Maunder's Olivet to Calvary will be sung, with Mr. Turner, Madeline and Kenneth Taylor as soloists. In addition, H. W. Jones' anthem, From Highest Heaven, also will be sung. Easter communion will be held.

Under the baton of D. W. Vaughan, the Edmonton Choral society will produce at the Masonic temple on Wednesday evening next, Sir Frederic Cowen's cantata, "The Sleeping Beauty." There will be orchestral accompaniment. A strong array of soloists will be on hand and the performance promises to be one of exceptional merit.

G-MEN BUREAU DOUBLES WORK

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation technical laboratory in which crime evidence is scientifically examined more than doubled in 1937, according to Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Some of the cases checked to the FBI laboratories by local peace officers are stranger than fiction.

In one instance, Sheriff Thomas W. Clark of Coupeville, Wash., asked the FBI for identification of a group of dogs which had been killing poultry wholesale in his vicinity.

The FBI experts compared a number of hairs taken from "dog suspects" with a hair found where the poultry had been slaughtered. The FBI experts cleared up the case for the sheriff.

Specimens of handwriting, typewriting, hairs, blood stains on clothing and other materials, and fatal bullets arrive at the bureau in an unending stream.

There they are submitted to an intensive round of tests—under the spectrograph, to toxicological, biochemical and metallurgical examinations.

Scores of experts are employed in the technical laboratory to ferret out from some slight clew—a blood stain, a bullet, or the type of dirt sometimes found on shoes—a chain of evidence to trap criminals.

Hoover said that the laboratory examined 33,785 specimens during 1937, more than 100 a day, compared with 14,761 in the preceding year; it also examined 217,056 signatures, comparing them with questioned writings.

Editor Stays

TORONTO, April 16—Rev. Archer Wallace, associate editor of United Church Sunday School publications, denied a rumor he would retire soon to Newfoundland. He is building a cabin there for summer vacations, he said.

On CFRN Sunday

member of the special committee in charge of The Bulletin-Kiwanis Radio Theatre Revue at the Empire theatre, May 30 and 31, with Foster Hewitt as Master of Ceremonies, who will speak over CFRN Sunday during the musical program 2:30 to 2:45. Mr. McGarvey is a member of the Kiwanis Club of Edmonton.

CAPETOWN OPENS BIG PROGRAM IN SLUM CLEARANCE

CAPETOWN, South Africa, April 16.—A gigantic slum-clearance rehousing scheme has been started in Capetown involving construction of 12,000 houses at a cost of £6,000,000 ($30,000,000).

The first section of the scheme, which means practically building a new town capable of housing 31,000 people, has already been started in the heart of district VI, the worst slum district of Capetown.

The second part of the scheme will deal with the district at the foot of Signal Hill Battery. The central housing board has given the city council permission to include as many four-storeyed blocks of flats in this section as it considers desirable.

FIRE MENACES HUGE CARGO AT FRISCO PIERS

50 Firemen Overcome By Threatening Waterfront Blaze

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16.—One of San Francisco's worst water front fires in years, a blaze at pier 48 that menaced two moored vessels and $200,000 worth of pier cargo, was halted from spreading at 10 p.m., but firemen said it might be 24 hours before the blaze could be extinguished.

All available fire-fighting equipment, 17 engine companies, seven hook and ladder companies and two fireboats and a coast guard boat were massed to fight the flames.

FIREMEN SUFFER

Fire Chief Charles Brennan and more than 50 firemen were given emergency treatment for smoke suffocation. George Reidy, a hoseman, was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

Chief Brennan estimated at 10 p.m., that the damage to the pier probably would total $100,000.

TWO TO RESCUE

The fire broke out at 2:26 p.m., underneath the pier, trapping 40 longshoremen who were loading the Calmar line freighter Massmar. A tug rescued the longshoremen. The Massmar was towed away, as also was the freighter Point Galeta of the Gulf-Pacific line, tied up at the adjoining pier.

Ostriches, being pursued over rocky ground, throw stones with great force at the pursuer; the great birds are not aware of this fact, however.

POPE VISTS CHARITY WORK GOOD FRIDA

Pontiff Saves Strength f Easter Mass and Also Canonizations

VATICAN CITY, April 16.—Pope Pius Friday interrupte his Good Friday meditations t visit an exhibit of Roman Cath olic charitable work.

The pontiff, saving his streng for the elaborate Easter mass a canonizations, had decided to spe the day in prayer in his apartmen but left for a few minutes to i spect the exhibit of the Itali Catholic Action in the vatican.

CHURCHES CROWDED

All amusement places were da and churches crowded as Italy o served the day in the usual solem manner.

Eighteen cardinals and ma other church dignitaries attended mass celebrated by Cardinal Pace papal secretary of state, in the Si tine chapel.

Later Cardinal Pacelli led t traditional Good Friday processi to the Pauline chapel. Near Ro in the village of Anticoli Carrad townsfolk re-enacted the passi play, many taking roles assigned their families for years.

HAMMER BLOW KILLS WOMAN IN CAMPBELLTON

CAMPBELLTON, N.B., April 16. —After a long struggle for life, Margaret Harris, 20, died in hospital early Friday from a severe head wound caused by a hammer blow March 30.

The injury resulted in arrest of Robert Barbour, 24. He has been remanded at Dalhousie until Thursday on a charge of attempted murder.

Miss Harris was found unconscious at Barbour's home. A bloodstained hammer lay in the same room. Shortly after the alleged assault, Barbour walked to the Dalhousie sheriff's office, made a statement, according to police, and was placed under arrest.

Wrong Pal

STOCKPORT, England, April 16. —"Be a pal, I've had a night out," a motorist here told the policeman who arrested him for drunk driving. He was fined £5 ($25) and had his license suspended for six months.

Fined For Gaming

WINDSOR, Ont., April 16. — Twenty-nine people were convicted and fined in connection with a raid on a "tobacco shop" where smokes were all dummy packages and a loudspeaker brought in latest race results.

What's New On The . . . RECORDS

BEING A REVIEW OF THE BEST NOW BEING TRANSCRIBED FOR GRAMOPHONES

By JOHN OLIVER

Always with a fine appreciation of the fitness of things and keeping pace with the progress of the seasons, the R.C.A. Vctor Company has provided a beautiful Masterpiece Set of records in the latest April Red Seal releases.

At this particular time, there is a dual sentiment in the air—the sentiment forever attached to springtime and the deeply moving sentiment that is attached to the Easter season. Easter on the one hand usually is associated with the official opening of spring, when new hats, suits and dresses make their appearance. That side of the picture is the lighter one.

PROFOUND SIDE

But, there is also a more profound side, associated with the sufferings of Jesus Christ and the sacrifices made for mankind.

Music plays its role in the Easter celebrations. It accompanies the various moods associated with the season.

Of all the music connected with Easter and more especially with Good Friday, the most profoundly moving of the days in this season, is that which Richard Wagner wrote in his opera Parsifal.

And this is where the Victor Company enters the picture with an importance that cannot be overestimated.

In the latest parcel of records the Victor Company presents a set played by the famous Philadelphia Orchestra, under the baton of Leopold Stokowski, of the most famous religious music from Parsifal —the Prelude and the Good Friday music.

AMONG BEST

By their performance of this music, on this set, the Philadelphia players and their conductor show that this is one of the finest achievements they have to their credit.

Here, every musical faculty with which Stokowski is plentifully endowed and all the musical resources, tremendous as they are, of the Philadelphia Orchestra are combined to give a performance that is commanding, compelling, memorable and moving.

Even those who are inclined to view Stokowski as a musical iconoclast, a radical and a venturesome spirit, must agree that on this occasion he has labored lovingly and well, to impart to the wax record for the benefit of the years to come the very best that he and his mighty orchestra under his direction, could do for this wonderful music.

The music of the Prelude is replete with reverence and wonder and in it the glowing tonal qualities of the orchestra are marvellously captured and revealed by the recording engineers.

The Good Friday music is permeated with a magic and a holy, reverent joy.

It weaves its spell over one, both by the beauty of the thematic material, the masterly way it has been developed and in the truly magnificent orchestration.

VALUABLE ADDITION

This is a set that will prove a valuable addition to the library of any music lover and collector of records. It is a set that will rank with the best yet made by Victor and will be a lasting tribute to the capacity of the great Philadelphia Orchestra.

More especially is it welcome at this season, as this outstanding religious music ranks among the world's best.

Also appropriate to this Easter season is the re-issue of two of the late Enrico Caruso's most valuable selections, Faure's The Palms and Cesar Franck's La Procession.

These two numbers, thrillingly re-vitalized in the re-recording process, rank among the best of the unforgettable Caruso. A lovely record for the Easter season.

Requirements of an American thoroughbred horse are that the pedigree contains 5 uncontaminated crosses.

DAM TO ERASE MISSOURI TOWN

GREENVILLE, Mo., April 16.— This 120-year-old Missouri town and surrounding Wayne County which contains some of the most fertile farm land in Southeastern Missouri soon may be inundated as a sacrifice to hill folk in surrounding Ozark communities.

Its doom awaits construction of the government $22,500,000 Wappapello dam which will control the rampaging St. Francis River which in less than 30 years has caused approximately $30,000,000 in property damage.

Southeastern Missouri long has faced the problem of harnessing the river which frequently has swept out of its banks, destroying homes, washing out crops and farm land, and drowning livestock.

When the government completes the dam, all of Greenville and most of the valuable farm land in Wayne County will be inundated.

The two, notedly prosperous in good crop years, must leave behind millions of dollars worth of buildings. The state's first PWA project, the $116,000 high school, and the almost new $65,000 Wayne County court house are slated to go. Much of the building material can go for salavage, but the government which reimbursed citizens for their property losses will take a tremendous loss.

An estimated 2,000 property owners throughout the county will receive condemnation remuneration from the government, but not all of them are in accord with the project. It will mean termination of business relations which they have established over a period of years, severance of family ties, and re-establishment of homes in other communities, they argue.

The Stockton and Barlington railway, in England, was the first public railway in the world. It opened Sept. 27, 1825.

Indian Committed

LONDON, Ont., April 16—Frank Waddilove, 38, of the Muncey Indian Reserve, was committed for trial for alleged manslaughter arising from the death of James Kechego, 50, also an Indian, whose body was found in a swamp.

Manhattan contains more than 1000 office buildings.

Women Members Proves Themselves No Dumb Clucks In House

CRISIS DEBATES FINDS FAIR SEX IN ACTIVE WAY

Chief Feminine Speaker Is Energetic Duchess Of Atholl

By MOLLIE McGEE
Canadian Press Correspondent

LONDON, April 16. — Women members of the British House of Commons have taken an active part in the serious international crisis debates held lately.

Chief feminine speaker was the energetic Duchess of Atholl who is usually referred to as "The Duchess" by parliamentarians and does not inspire quite the same camaraderie as the other titled member, Viscountess Astor, who is known far and wide as "Nancy" Astor. Together, however, these two Conservatives have a reputation for frank speaking that is not exceeded even by Ellen Wilkinson of the Labor ranks.

AIRS HER VIEWS

It is in regard to Spain in particular that Katharine, Duchess of Atholl, airs her views, and not so long ago her soldier husband, elderly dignified peer, rose grumbling from his seat in the House of Lords to reply to references made to the Duchess' speeches in the commons. "My wife's always getting me into trouble," was his first sentence.

Since she left Wimbledon high school, the Duchess has been interested in public affairs. Her self-organized tour of the Spanish front in company of Ellen Wilkinson and Eleanor Rathbone was the latest venture in an adventurous career.

Smart, grey-haired, worldly wise and shrewd, she is completely self-possessed in the house. Her speeches are clear and scholarly though her viewpoint in politics appears to have shifted in the last few years from extreme right to about as far left as a Conservative can go.

PROLIFIC WRITER

Directly across the house from the Duchess and behind the leader of the opposition, C. R. Attlee, sits red-headed Miss Wilkinson, always on the edge of her chair, chirpy as a canary with her interruptions and out of her seat on the slightest provocation.

Ellen wears no hat. Her unruly mop has blown free since the days when she interested working women in equal suffrage in 1913-1915. On the same platforms she learned the art of heckling and questioning that makes her a formidable opponent in the commons. Nor does she spare her own sex. "The noble lady whose husband owns newspapers," was her recent reference to Lady Astor.

SUFFRAGETTE ZEST

Her oratory still has the zest of the suffragette, her remarks the ready wit of England's working class, yet Ellen has her university degree from Manchester. Her favorite occupations are reading and chess and she is the most prolific article writer among women in parliament.

It is for her work out of parliament that Nancy Astor is being mentioned in the papers. Though the indomitable and perky little woman has shaken off criticism and abuse that came to her for years because she was the first woman in parliament, cartoons and articles have kept her busy writing letters to editors in the last few weeks.

Lady Astor is recognized as the most active of political hostesses and her expressed enthusiasm for Anglo-German friendship has been the cause of a storm. As usual, being herself is her main asset and she is carrying on in missives that are direct and to the point, stating her purpose, denying rumors.

MORE RETICENT

Miss Rathbone, who has also been appearing in Hansard, is of the older, more reticent generation and is rarely addressed in any other way, though her first name is Eleanor.

Her visit to Spain provoked her to firm, well-expressed speeches in the house though not to unseemly interruptions.

With all the well-trained ability of an early daughter of Somerville college, Oxford, she is a firm supporter of her more excitable colleagues, though her main interest is family welfare and the betterment of conditions for women.

Behind scenes in parliament, no one has mattered more lately than Miss Thelma Cazalet, sister of popular, good-looking Victor Cazalet, M.P.

LEADING MEMBER

She is the leading member of the committee that superintends parliamentary meals and the great new dining room, where serious and secret discussions take place over chops and epoch-making decisions are made over coffee.

"Always on time, always dependable, always ready to speak well on any given subject" is Thelma Cazalet's reputation with members of her various committees. As a background she has had 10 years experience in local government work and was a hard-working official in that almost breath-taking efficient organization, the London County Council.

Miss Megan Lloyd George, M.P., —her father's right hand man — Miss Irene Ward, champion of the inmates of charitable institutions, are others among the more than a dozen women in parliament who are being heard with evident respect.

Tragedy Takes Its Toll

Here's what happens when the brakes don't grip fast enough!

A badly injured man, a worried wife and a wrecked car—and sometimes a trip to the morgue to end the tragedy.

This man was "whooping it up" along the highway. Behind the wheel of a good car, he started stepping on it. Faster. . . . faster . . . Fifty miles an hour . . . sixty . . . seventy . . . Then some loose gravel on a curve; or a car whips out from a side-road. A sickening lurch off the highway, with a car roaring along at a mad pace out of control. Crash! And everything goes black.

How many times has such a scene been enacted on Alberta roads? Literally hundreds of times. The story is always the same—speeding and the brakes didn't hold.

Sane speed and good brakes go hand-in-hand for safety.

The man who takes to the road and drives fast or slow with faulty brakes is a menace. The law regards him as such. Either he gets his brakes renewed or adjusted . . . or else! The police know what to do with people like that.

The safety drive sponsored by the Edmonton Kiwanis Club in conjunction with the city police department's annual brake-test campaign is an effort to prevent repetition of the scene shown above. There's small comfort for anyone after the accident. Sometimes death—always a big hospital or car repair bill.

Tragedy lurks every foot of the way when the brakes won't work.

Police are appealing to every public-spirited and sensible motorist to have his brakes checked, as much in his own interest as in the interest of others.

CONSERVATION GAS BOARD OFFICE IS LIKELY IN CALGARY

CALGARY, April 16.—Maintenance of an office in Calgary by the Gas Conservation Board to be set up by the Alberta government under the new Petroleum and Gas Conservation Act, will be urged by the Petroleum Producers' Association.

In a statement issued from the association's office here today it was explained the board should have its office in Calgary and not in Edmonton so as to be easily available to the individual producer.

Objection is taken to a provision of the act which provides for a levy on producers for the cost of administration of the board which will direct conservation of gas in the Turner Valley oil field.

"The government should set aside a small percentage of their present 10 per cent royalty from the producers to provide board operation costs," said the statement.

The new act will be discussed at a meeting of the association here next week, following which it is expected representation for the Calgary office and other changes in the act will be made to the government.

Boston Trawler Crew Picked Up

BOSTON, April 16.—The crew of the diesel trawler Exeter of Boston was picked up late today by coast guards, who reported the Exeter burning south of the Nova Scotia coast. The coast guard cutter Algonquin reported she picked up Captain V. Nickerson and the eight men in his crew. All were well and uninjured. They were afloat five hours before they were picked up.

Studebaker Truck Sales Increase Being Sustained

WALKERVILLE, Ont., April 16—With factory shipments of Studebaker trucks during March 37% ahead of the same month last year, it was the fourteenth consecutive month in which truck sales have substantially surpassed those of the identical month in the previous year, according to a statement released today by D. C. Gaskin, sales manager, the Studebaker Corporation of Canada, Ltd.

"The genuine demand for Studebaker commercial cars and trucks continues to grow," said Mr. Gaskin, "as we daily receive telegrams and phone calls from dealers across Canada asking us to speed up deliveries. Due to this widening public acceptance our factory sales of commercial cars during the quarter just finished were the third best when compared to any similar period in our history. The fact that we enter April with 30% more truck orders on file than at the same time last year is a significant indication that Studebaker dealers across Canada will continue this fine sales performance."

Agriculture in Florida is diversified. Including tropical, sub-tropical, and temperate types, 200 different kinds of tree and field crops are grown there.

NOTICE TO MOTORISTS

The "Brakes O.K." Campaign sponsored by the Traffic Department of the City Police has met with the co-operation of all Garages and Service Stations and the majority of the Fleet Owners of the City.

Many City Motorists have already had their Brakes tested and checked, to do their part in making the City Streets safe. To these motorists we say "Thank You."

The Traffic Squad are commencing a definite check-up of all cars not carrying the Safety Sticker. You will avoid being stopped by the Police if you obtain your Sticker today.

Miss Pollock, Mr. C. Ryall Exchange Vows

Attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ryall on 104th street was the setting for a pretty pre-Easter wedding ceremony on Friday evening when Miss Frances Elizabeth Pollock, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Macrae Pollock of Edmonton became the bride of Mr. Carman Victor Ryall, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ryall.

Miss Vera Ryall attended the bride while Mr. Macrae Pollock acted as best man.

For her wedding the bride chose a smart tailleur in brown, with which she wore a small turban with veil and accessories in brown and a mink fur.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for immediate families of the bride and bridegroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryall will make their home in Edmonton.

Honey And Lemon....

—By N.H.L.

I saw the spires of Oxford
As I was passing by
The grey spires of Oxford
Against a pearl-gray sky.

OXFORD! Embodying the hopes and fears of your whole school career, symbolizing the "last enchantments of the Middle Ages," and synonymous with the intellectual life of the empire, the very word is uttered with a catch of your breath as you gaze at the magnificent domes and towers of Oxford and realize that soon you, too, will be wandering down its noble curving streets, "An eager novice robed in fluttering gown."

Yielding to the irresistible impulse which prompts nearly all future students to "go up" to Oxford long before commencement of the term, you are taking your first shy peep at the splendid collection of olden chapels and colleges about which you will shortly be striding on confident, second-year-man feet. You are thinking of a phrase you read once about Oxford "whose gray spires have for almost a thousand years looked down on an unbroken procession of great men and great events," and you are tremendously proud, and oh tremendously nervous!

OH, DEAH ME, NO!

Protesting laughingly as we plied him with questions about the shrine at which scholars worship the world over, the charming Oxford visitor detoured a little at this point to clarify for us the business of "going up" for the school term and "going down" for vacations. We couldn't see why it wouldn't be just the same to "go down" for one's studies and "up" for holidays but our friend assured us that "it simply isn't done you know. It simply isn't done." We weren't convinced but dismissed the matter as something delightfully "British."

You're not a "freshie" in your first year at Oxford as you are here, but a "fresher". The name, however, is not very important, all first year students being readily recognized in the very correctly dressed, very upright figures strolling with determined nonchalance in the general direction of the porter's lodge.

YOU DON'T "WANT TO BE ALONE"

Finally you are shown to your rooms. The door closes on the porter's broad back. You are alone, and that cold, empty feeling just below your heart gets no better.

You seek refuge for the next hour or so in vast activity, unpacking things at a great rate and scattering familiar pictures and knick knacks about in a frenzied attempt to inspire a little home atmosphere. But it's no use, you are definitely lonely and definitely frightened.

You must have company, and you dash out to look up some of the fellows you went to school with. They too, however, have gone out in search of friends and you wander out into the town. It is nearly tea time and you are very hungry. You had foregone lunch of course, because the porter had told you it would be served in the "J.C.R." (Junior Common Room) and you had no idea where the "J.C.R." was, much less what to do when you got there.

CLOTHES MARK THE MAN

You have been glad all along that at least your appearance was all that it should be. And then suddenly you wish it weren't. All spick and span in your blue serge, you suddenly feel very conspicuous among the second and third year men in their baggy grey flannels and their ill-fitting coats. You leave the shop before you have half finished your tea.

PRACTICALLY A VETERAN

In a day or two, however, the prospect became a little brighter. You know where things are, you are calling the porter by name, you have met a few old acquaintances who seemed actually nervous until you bucked them up a bit! You experience a deep satisfaction in simply pacing the same mouldering cloisters as did Steele and Addison, De Quincey, Ruskin, Newman, Matthew Arnold, Sir Robert Peel and Gladstone, Locke the philosopher, Gibbon the historian and a host of others whose names compose the long and glorious honor roll of English history and letters.

You begin to thrill each night as the bell in Tom Tower strikes 101 times (because Cardinal Wolsey first designated Christ Church for 100 scholars and a dean) . . . After all, you ARE at Oxford Oxford, where England's greatest statesmen, poets and philosophers have been nurtured in traditions of beauty and sweetness, Oxford "whose very stones echo wisdom."

Superintendent

MISS WILLA SANDISON, well known Edmonton sportswoman, who is lending her assistance as superintendent of the Junior Hospital League fifth annual dog show, to be held in the Memorial hall, on Monday and Tuesday, April 18 and 19. Miss Sandison, a member of the Hospital League, is a splendid horsewoman and rider as well as being particularly fond of dogs. Convener of the Dog Show is Miss Dorothy Williams. His Honor Captain John Campbell Bowen, lieutenant-governor of Alberta will officiate at the formal opening ceremonies at two o'clock on Monday afternoon, when accompanying him will be Mrs. Bowen and Dr. and Mrs. Roderick Washburn.

"Y" Notebooks

Mrs. Boyle will be the speaker at the Vesper Service at 4:30 p.m. on Sunday in the "Y" club room. Miss E. J. Pugh will be the chairman and Mrs. G. R. Barnes the tea hostess. Special Easter music will be a part of the service.

There will be no meeting of Gay League on Easter Monday, no meeting of the Canucks and no classes in the physical education department.

Easter week will be a busy one in the gym of the Y. W. C. A. with extra practices and a special timetable scheduled for each class so that each girl will be ready for the demonstration at the Empire Theatre on May 7. The modern dancing classes are working specially hard to make their section of the program more interesting than ever before music dances, greetings, gossip, lament and several others, and one done without music, promise to provide an interesting evening.

ALBERTANS WILL "READ ANYTHING" IS CLAIM

MONTREAL, April 12.—Literary preference is for fiction in Manitoba, and non-fiction in Saskatchewan but the people in Alberta, Lady Tweedsmuir said on Monday, like "anything you send them—they seem to read everything." Speaking to Montreal Hadassah, the wife of Canada's Governor-General expressed her thanks to members for their contributions to her prairie libraries scheme.

Many organizations had given similar aid, she said, and "I am hoping that by the time I leave Canada I shall have been able to send out 30,000 books, which ought to form a nucleus of a library service which I hope will be taken over by the universities or someone else."

SOLDIERS TO ENTERTAIN AT DANCE

Promising to be one of the most colorful affairs of Easter week is the St. Julien dance at which members of the Canadian Corps Association plan to entertain in the Tivoli ballroom on Friday evening, April 22, which marks the anniversary of the famous battle in which many of their number saw service.

To be held under the distinguished patronage of His Honor Captain John Campbell Bowen, the lieutenant governor, who is himself a member of the association, and Mrs. Bowen, the affair will commence at nine o'clock, when a nine-piece orchestra will play for the dancing.

The Canadian Corps now boast more than 1500 members, all of whom saw service in 1914-1918, and many of them will be present on Friday, their scarlet, French grey, blue and green berets representing the first, second, third and fourth division corps troops. Several of the Nursing Sisters associated with the organization will also be among the guests.

Mrs. S. W. Dyde is honorary patroness for the affair, patronesses including besides Mrs. Bowen, Mrs. W. A. Griesbach, Mrs. N. Curtis and Mrs. C. E. McManus.

Planned in aid of the charitable work of the organization, the party has been arranged by the Ways and Means Committee of which Mr. N. Curtis is chairman.

Newspaperwoman Is Bride At High Noon Ceremony

Myles-Butler Wedding Is Of Wide Interest

Best wishes of fellow members of the "fourth estate" as well as those of hosts of friends in university and social circles, are extended today to Eugenie Louise Butler well-known newspaperwoman, and Ernest Alexander Myles who were married at a quiet ceremony in First Presbyterian Church at high noon and left shortly afterwards on a honeymoon trip to the Pacific coast.

CLEVER STUDENT

A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Butler of this city, the bride began a splendid academic career in high school days, twice attaining highest marks in provincial examinations, and was already well-known in educational circles when she enrolled at the University of Alberta of which she is a graduate in honors English.

For the past several years she has been a member of the editorial staff of the Edmonton Journal, lately on the Women's Page where her work brought her into daily contact with members of Edmonton's club and social circles.

The bridegroom, who is popularly known in business circles in the city, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Myles of Arbroath, Scotland.

Rev. Ross K. Cameron performed the ceremony, at which Miss Eileen Butler, sister of the bride, and Mr. Fraser Goddard, were attendants. Only the parents of the bride and a few relatives and friends were present.

NAVY SILK SHEER

The bride chose for the occasion a tailored costume of navy silk sheer, the jacket buttoned high over a bodice of shirred satin in old rose and distinguished by front pleating to match the skirt. Her hat was a French model in navy-colored straw, worn with a shoulder-length veil trimmed in pale rose chenille. Sprays of lilies of the valley and white heather, clustering around an orchid, were affixed to her purse, which like her gloves and shoes, was in navy.

A grey tailleur with navy colored blouse and accessories was the selection of Miss Eileen Butler, the bridesmaid, who wore a becoming off-the-face hat with a tiny veil and a circular purse with a knot of lilies of the valley and gardenias arranged similarly to the flowers of the bride.

Returning to Edmonton in early May, Mr. and Mrs. Myles will take up residence on 113 street.

MRS. ERNEST A. MYLES, who before her marriage at a charmingly simple ceremony in First Presbyterian Church on Saturday was Eugenie Louise Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Butler and popular member of newspaper, university and social circles of the province. Upon their return from a Pacific coast honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Myles will be at home to their friends at their residence in 113 street.

Provincial Girl Guide Secretary Resigns Post

Resignation of Mrs. George Mathieson, former provincial secretary of the Girl Guides' Association, was regrettably accepted at a meeting of the executive one day this week in the Y.W.C.A. club rooms. It is announced today. Miss Helen Burns a Blue Card Diploma Guider, will hold training classes in Cadomin from Friday, April 15, until Monday, April 18, it is further announced.

The Cross

By Dora Byron

His cross was but
A common thing
Of cypress wood.
Upon a tired hill,
Desolate, it stood:
And yet its arms have reached from sea to sea.
Arms so strong that they have set man free;
And love so bright burning long ago
Changed the cross to gold with its glow.
My cross sometimes
Is a weary thing,
Too hard to bear,
A tiny ugly thing;
It floods my life
In hopeless care;
But with His love
I, too, will make
That cross of gold,
And pour the dark
Tear-stained wood
Into His mould.
My cross can never
Stretch its arms
From sea to sea,
But it can raise
My heart to God,
And set me free.

LONDON, April 16. — Nineteen Canadians will be presented to Their Majesties at the court on May 12 by Mrs. Vincent Massey, wife of the high commissioner. Six others will attend the evening presentation party given for married women and their husbands on May 25 and about an equal number will be invited to similar affairs in July.

Pacific Islands Are Subject Of Travel Talk

Beautiful islands of the Pacific, the Hawaiian Islands, formed the subject of a most interesting evening at the home of Mrs. Norman L. Terwilliger, who has recently returned from spending some weeks there, when she recalled for members of the Athenaeum Club something of the loveliness of the place, the history of the people and the industrial life of the islands.

Motion pictures taken by Dr. and Mrs. Terwilliger while on their trip illustrated the interesting things Mrs. Terwilliger had to say of the islands.

The meeting, which concluded with a social hour over the coffee cups, was the final meeting of the club for the year.

'The Drunkard' Will Be Fine Entertainment

Pea-ee-nuts! Pea-ee-nuts! Vendors will be shouting their wares during intermissions, ushers, as in the days of old, will be bursting into song, the audience will be asked to join in the rollicking choruses of pre-war favorites. Oh, yes, patrons of the Belasco Players presentation of "The Drunkard" or "The Fallen Saved" in the Masonic Temple on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of next week are in for a lot of fun.

Produced originally under the management of P. T. Barnum of circus fame, the play was taken quite seriously for a time, being repeated at intervals for about seven years in various United States cities. It was lost early in the 1860's, however, and it was not until 1926 that it was discovered in a trunk stored in an attic, and produced with great success in Berkeley, California.

In July, 1933, it was revived in Hollywood, with its entire music-hall atmosphere including the Olio, and was a complete success.

The Belasco players, who include some 50 persons, will all have some part in the production, the stage crew, the lightricians and the ushers all singing and dancing as well as doing their appointed tasks.

In the Olio the Belasco male quartet consisting of Jim Richardson, Stuart Carson, Donald McLeod and Berwyn Griffith will be featured.

Over The Wires

FEWER U.S. DEBS TO BE PRESENTED AT COURT

LONDON, April 16.—Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to the court of St. James, has dashed the hopes of hundreds of United States debutants by announcing that the number of American girls presented to the King and Queen would be drastically reduced.

He said he considered "undemocratic" the practice of American ambassadors in selecting every year "a small number of young ladies from a long list, very few, if any, of whom he has ever seen."

Accordingly, he said he had decided to confine presentations to the families of American officials in Great Britain and to members of American families domiciled in Britain.

Mr. Kennedy reported the Court was ready as always to receive as many American women as in the past. He said the embassy for many years had presented between 20 and 30 annually.

New I.O.D.E. Unit Formed In Alberta

Establishment of a new primary chapter of the I.O.D.E. in Alberta, in Rocky Mountain House, is of considerable interest in I.O.D.E. circles here. Announcement of the establishment was made at the National Executive committee meeting of the order held just recently.

Arrangements for the forthcoming national annual meeting to be held in Vancouver, from Saturday, May 28, to Thursday, June 2, comprised the chief business of the executive meeting.

Try Caribbean Cruise In Your Own Kitchen

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

If you want to be different, try cooking "Puerto Rico". These Caribbean recipes may not take the place of a spring cruise, but they will add sunshine to your routine menus.

PUDIN DE BERENJENA (EGGPLANT PUDDING)

(Serves 4 to 6)

One pound eggplant, 2 eggs, salt, 1 cup cracker crumbs, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ cup grated cheese, 6 tablespoons milk.

Boil the eggplant and mash. Beat the eggs and mix all ingredients. Put in oven in a greased baking dish. The oven should have moderate temperature. In twenty minutes the pudding is ready for serving. It is preferable to use a glass baking dish so it can be served in the same dish.

Governor Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico likes to eat well. Here are two dishes he often enjoys.

BAKED YAMS

Wash and brush yams. Cut lengthwise. Bake in oven till tender. Remove the insides from the shell. Mash and beat until foamy, with butter, salt, milk and white pepper. Fill the shell with this mixture and, on top, place small pieces of butter and powdered cracker crumbs. Remove to oven and brown. Serve hot.

ARROZ CON POLLO

(2 chickens, 2 pounds each)

Separate chicken in pieces. Season with salt, pepper, onion, capers, olives and sweet pepper, and stew with butter and sweet oil until tender. Then take 2 pounds rice, wash well, add sufficient water and cook until rice becomes tender.

Monday's Menu

BREAKFAST: Bananas and cream, dry cereal, cornbread, maple syrup, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Baked yams, crisp bacon, fresh fruit compote, cookies, tea, milk.

WHAT PRICE GOOD-WILL?

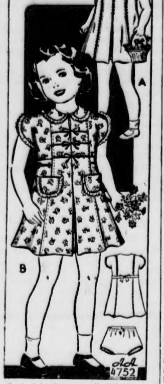
Good-will is a powerful factor in building consumer acceptance for any product. Most business concerns consider it fully as important as price-appeal . . . and in the case of many products and services it has an even greater influence on sales.

The daily newspaper reader has a warm regard for the paper of his choice . . . his reaction to the advertisements in it is colored by that sentiment. Here is a point advertisers might wisely keep in mind when allocating their advertising expenditures.

This advertisement prepared for the Canadian Daily Newspapers' Association by the Imperial Advertising Agency.

Bulletin Patterns

By Anne Adams



Just right for a small girl to wear for everyday or dress-up is this delightful young frock! Miss "Two to Ten" will certainly be proud of this fetching style—and Mother will be pleased at the ease with which she can make up Pattern 4752. Do notice the neat panel, brief sleeves, Peter Pan collar, and two little pockets! All this youthful flattery is accepted by dainty bows and ruffle trimming! Make young Mary-Ann a second version, too—with colorful ricrac and a simple neckline. For fabric, chambray or dimity would prove dainty—while swiss would serve beautifully for dress-up.

Pattern 4752 is available in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 takes 2⅜ yards 36 inch fabric and 4⅛ yards lace edging. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions.

Send 20 cents in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly Size, Name, Address and Style Number.

Send you order to Pattern Department, The Edmonton Bulletin, Edmonton, Alberta.

DR. GRANT ADDRESSES CENTRAL UNITED W.A.

"Lighting fires in cold rooms" was the subject on which Dr. W. M. Grant addressed members of the Central United Church W.A. at their Easter Thank-offering meeting recently. Stressing the significance of Easter in the experiences and achievements which followed, Dr. Grant stated that before the resurrection, the hope had been to redeem Israel, while afterwards it was to redeem the world.

In charge of the devotional period were Mrs. J. D. Hughes and Mrs. J. F. MacKenzie and the soloist was Mrs. E. Dalling.

Miss Jean MacKenzie was made the recipient of a life membership, presented to her by Mrs. A. E. Black, on behalf of the W.M.S. in memory of her mother, Mrs. K. W. MacKenzie, who passed away in February.

There are 170 Catholic homes for the aged and 672 Catholic hospitals in the United States.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

THE greatest menace to marriage is the philanderer. He is the headache and the heartache to millions of wives; the blight that turns life into cinders, ashes and dust for them; the problem which they can never solve because they can neither be happy with him nor without him.

If he was a villain who deliberately tortured his wife with his affairs with other women, she would know what to do about it. So she also would if she knew that he had fallen deeply, passionately in love with some one else. But, as a general thing, the philanderer's infidelities have not even the dignity of tragedy. They are merely the amorous amusements of a man who has no depth of feeling or loyalty in him, and who could not be faithful to any one. He is a playboy who takes his pleasure where he finds it, as Mr. Kipling said, and who tires of his Lady Lovers as quickly as he did of his wife.

Indeed, oftener than not, whatever of real affection he is capable of is given to his wife. He admires and respects her as he does no other woman. She remains his ideal through all his wanderings down the primrose path, and in the end, when, like Solomon, the greatest philanderer of them all, he is sick of love and wants to be stayed with flagons and fed on apples, he comes back to her if she has camped on the hearthstone and kept the home fires burning.

Curiously enough and ironically enough, except for his weakness for petticoat-chasing, the philanderer is in many cases an ideal husband and father; amiable and pleasant to have around the house, generous and kind. And not infrequently he is a great lover at home as well as abroad and lavishes on his wife the little attentions he uses in his pursuit of his latest girl friend.

What makes the philanderer philander, nobody knows. Perhaps it is the same instinct that makes the butterfly flit from flower to flower. Perhaps it is vanity that requires to be constantly fed on new conquests. Perhaps it is just the love of adventure, the thrill and excitement of playing the love game. But, whatever it is, it is there in his breast, stronger than any sense of duty, stronger than any pity for the woman whose life he took into his hands and that he is wrecking with his unfaithfulness.

So what is the poor wife to do whose soul is torn with jealousy and whose pride is dragged in the dust by her philandering husband? Shall she forgive him over and over again when he gets fed up with his last charmer and comes back repentant to home and Mother? Or shall she buy a ticket to Reno? Shall she pretend to be not only blind but also dumb, and that she doesn't suspect what all of her friends and neighbors are gossiping about, and thus save her face? Or shall she wage a perpetual fight with him over every new affair?

Different women answer the question in different ways. Most of them rush to the divorce court, which is generally jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, for many a flirtatious husband is a good provider, and when a woman finds herself with a decree absolute in one hand and a little grudgingly-given alimony in the other, she wonders why she ever bothered about her husband casting a roving eye on every pretty girl he met.

A philosophical woman I know once told me that she knew all about her husband's philanderings and that she hated them, of course, but she added, "Every husband has something a wife has to put up with. I'd rather be married to a man who makes romantic love to me, even if he does probably say the same things to other women, than to one of these dry-as-dust husbands who never mentions the state of his affections from the altar to the grave."

And still another woman whose husband was an incorrigible philanderer said to him: "We are friends. We have many things in common, including our children and our home. I have spent years helping you build your fortune, and I'm staying. We won't quarrel over your affairs. All I ask is that you keep them away from me. I have cultivated stupidity and blindness until I like it."

So there you are, ladies, and you can take your choice of methods of dealing with the philanderers. DOROTHY DIX.

Raising A Family -

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Now we must not think that this little child of four, or thereabouts, is a combination of little demon and little angel, having temper storms one minute and behaving like a saint the next. As a matter of fact, he is just busy living. He's a very lovable youngster, even though occasionally stubborn and independent.

O. R. Barton

He is a jokster, too, and loves his laughs. He is still imaginative, but is able to distinguish more and more truths. So he wants a variety of stories, including stories that could be true. He continues to make friends among characters of child-fiction. Loyalties are born now, and his chums of storyland are important to him.

Construction becomes a passion, and love of drama increases, with himself as hero. Your chairs will be upside down half the time, to make caves for Indians, or maybe just car-barns for patient trains. If you are very anxious about your good Chippendales or Sheratons, then I should put them away for safer times. I knew a woman who boasted that every chair in her living room stood in its own original marks in the rug. Her little boy took to dunning away, and almost invariably they would find him a couple of blocks off at Danny's. Danny had a dog, if I remember, and lots of freedom. Danny never came to this house, as you might know.

Every child of four needs a number of things to play with. He won't be so quick these days to clear up his muss. It surprises you, naturally, when six months ago he was so good at putting things away. He won't be quite so contrite, either, when he has dragged in mud. You won't be able to make him sorry in the least, as you used to, just because you weep or "feel bad". He may stare at you, turn and stamp right out. Don't wail. Don't break your heart. This is quite all part of it. Independence is not always beautiful.

LIVE IN OWN WORLD

This child will stand fair discipline well, but you will be puzzled at his contradictions. Perhaps, if you understand him better, his real sins can be sorted from his "phase" processes, and you will know when he has exceeded his allowance.

Little boys gradually become less interested in trains on tracks carrying real people and real freight, than in their own electric ones. Possessiveness and mastery work together now. Little girls won't be so anxious now to help you "housekeep," any more, but instead will be washing their own doll clothes, and making their own doll beds.

The child of four or five should have from half a dozen to perhaps a dozen toys, if possible. He, or she, is learning to relate one thing with another, now, and inventing good drama. Never again will play be quite so serious and exciting as it is right now.

The 26 acres of glass roofing in the Crystal Palace, London's famous amusement spot, contain more than 100,000 panes.

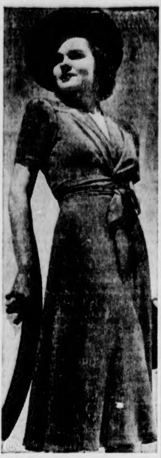
Basic Frock



A lovely example of the popular basic dress, that practical creation which is smart any hour of the day and is a wonderful background for jewelry or furs, is this beautifully cut spring frock. Of semi-sheer rayon crepe, it has a swinging skirt, sculptured bodice with skillful fagotting, short sleeves and a twisted girdle.

Mr. And Mrs. Lyons Are Entertained On Anniversary

MORGAN, April 16.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lyons were honored guests at a happy dinner party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McClung recently when a number of friends gathered to celebrate with them the silver anniversary of their wedding. Joint hostesses with Mrs. McClung were Mrs. Charles Hall and Mrs. John Bates of Edmonton, sisters of Mrs. Lyons.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyons were made the recipients of a radio and many lovely gifts of silver as a token of the high esteem in which they are held by their friends.

Toast to the guests of honor was proposed by Mr. D. M. Gibson. A delightful mock wedding ceremony added to the entertainment of guests at the affair when those taking part were the bride and groom of 25 years, Mr. and Mrs. McClung, Mr. Hays and Mr. Alex Seright.

Namao U.F.W.A. Luncheon Meet Is Interesting

Luncheon meeting of the Namao U.F.W.A. held at the home of Mrs. J. S. Samis recently proved to be an interesting one with short talks on several subjects being given. Mrs. Auten spoke briefly on Horticulture, while Mrs. Jamieson discussed Health Current Events. Mrs. C. Craig, health convener, also gave a short paper and Mr. Monaghan, of the group hospital board, was a guest speaker from Edmonton.

Next meeting of the organization will be held at the home of Mrs. W. G. Jamieson.

SIX NEW MEMBERS JOIN McDOUGALL CHURCH L.A.

Mrs. A. Neilson reported that six new members had joined the society when McDougall church Women's Auxiliary met recently. Very encouraging reports were also read by the secretary, Mrs. H. Bassett, and the treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Boon.

An interesting talk on "Our Obligations and How We Look At Them" was given during the afternoon by Rev. A. K. McMinn.

Mrs. H. Wren and Mrs. Eric Wright volunteered to be hospital visitors during the month while Mrs. W. H. Kelcher will serve on the parsonage committee.

The president, Mrs. W. F. Empey, presided at the meeting.

IN THE HYGIENE COURT OF JUSTICE

Typist Accused of Headaches
(Before Mr. Justice Kruschen)

PROSECUTING COUNSEL: This, my lord, is a case of a young woman charged with habitual headaches. It is a sad case, because her affliction renders her unfit for work or play, a misery . . .
JUDGE: What is a headache? (laughter)
COUNSEL: The dictionary defines it as a continuous pain in the head.
JUDGE: (addressing prisoner): Why do you have a continuous pain in the head, young lady?
PRISONER: I don't know, my lord. It isn't my fault.
JUDGE: The question of whose fault it is will be decided by this Court. Do you admit the charge?
PRISONER: Yes, my lord.
JUDGE: What steps do you take to prevent these headaches?
PRISONER: I sometimes take a sedative, my lord.
JUDGE: Sedative? Do you really mean to tell me that a sedative prevents headaches?
PRISONER: No, my lord, of course a sedative doesn't exactly prevent them, it. . . .
JUDGE: Have you ever heard of Kruschen?
PRISONER: Yes, my lord. I used to take it regularly.
JUDGE: And did you have headaches then?
PRISONER: N-no.
JUDGE: Young lady, you may count yourself fortunate in being brought before me. In this court we regard preventable illness as a crime. The complaint from which you suffer is caused by nothing else but neglect—neglect of the very first rule of sane and healthy living. It is caused, like so many other afflictions, simply and solely by constipation—or that even more dangerous and far more prevalent condition of semi-constipation. A pinch of Kruschen Salts—as much as will lie on a ten-cent piece—taken in a cup of coffee, tea, or a glass of water, every morning will help to finally and completely rid you of your trouble. My ruling is that you go straightway and get a bottle of Kruschen and begin this necessary practice tomorrow morning.

KRUSCHEN SALTS
relieve constipation and rheumatism

Kruschen is a combination of several mineral salts which your body must get, in some way, to keep the blood pure, the inside clean, and the system generally toned up, but which you can't get in Nature's own way without abundant exercise and fresh air. You should have those salts every day; hence the importance of the "little daily dose". Every drug counter sells Kruschen in 25c, 45c and 75c bottles. It's the little daily dose that does it.

"Over The Teacups"— Twenty Years Ago

From the Files of the Edmonton Bulletin

LUNCH with Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks! Could any film fan aspire to greater heights? Could anything be more wonderful than to sit at a snowy table with gleaming silver and watch Mary toss back her curls, enjoy her famous smile, and hear her actually talk? To watch Charlie eat in regular fashion like other people without even the mention of custard pie? Has any motion picture lover ever wished for anything more? Well, one of Edmonton's well-known citizens, J. W. Heffernan, has returned from just such a meal. Mr. Heffernan briefly refers to it as one of the incidents of a six-weeks' tour of the republic to the south. It was at the opening of the Third Liberty Loan Campaign, midnight on April 5, that Mr. Heffernan arrived in New York. During the following morning a hundred million dollars worth of bonds were sold in New York City. Mary, Charlie and Doug. were largely instrumental in raising this amount.

OF THE 1,500,000 Allied prisoners of war now incarcerated in enemy countries, not more than 65,000 are receiving any outside help or the very necessary supplies to sustain life. It is found that it requires $2 a month to keep an Allied prisoner alive, and the Women's Canadian Club of Edmonton will hold a tag day on Saturday, April 20, to raise money for this very worthy object. The club is anxious to take care of 100 of these unfortunate and needy men, and the citizens will be given an opportunity in this cause.

Tomorrow night the Edmonton Orchestra gives its last program of the season at the Pantages theatre at 9 o'clock. Following up the policy of new numbers, there are two on the program, the "Prelude" to the music drama "Tristan and Isolde," and a Divertisement from L. Delibes' ballet, "Le Source." An outstanding feature of the program will be numbers by the Edmonton Male Chorus under the direction of Mr. W. J. Hendra.

Mrs. L. C. McKinney, M.P.P., gave an excellent address before the W.M.S. of McDougall Methodist church Monday evening. The speaker was much appreciated. Rev. A. S. Tuttle occupied the chair, and Mrs. McKinney spoke on the "War of the Future." The war of women for purer, better, cleaner and finer politics was the point she stressed. As the best of manhood was away fighting for us and our freedom, the women should not fold their hands and shout with the crowd, but they were to accept the challenge, look the situation in the face, and go out to right the wrongs and prevent the evils which threaten.

FOR brilliancy of color and gorgeous scenic effects the Edmonton Amateur Operatic Society has never produced a finer comic than that of "The Earl and the Girl," of which the first performance was given Wednesday night in the Empire theatre under the direction of Vernon W. Barford and the distinguished patronage of His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Brett. In its eleventh season, the Society gave a most creditable account of itself, keeping up to the high standard always attained.

Among the audience were Mrs. George Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Yockney, Mrs. W. G. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Potter, Mr. Balmer Watt, Dr. and Mrs. Gray, Dr. Farquharson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wallbridge, members of the Dekan Grotto, and many returned soldiers.

These Mistakes Mar Well-Groomed Women

By ALICIA HART

It is a mistake to—

Forget that it is far better to lose weight by dieting plus exercise than by dieting alone. Or to go on a rigid diet without first consulting your family doctor.

Expect a once-a-week brushing—namely the one you get in a beauty shop just before your shampoo—to keep your scalp clean, hair healthy. Every woman should use her hairbrush every night.

Wear your hair the same way year after year.

Forget to have our dentist clean your teeth at least twice a year.

Begrudge alteration fees. If a dress doesn't really fit, you're better off without it.

Wear a boutonniere that isn't clean and fresh looking. If it can't be cleaned, throw it away as soon as it is noticeably soiled.

Buy stockings too short or too long. The short ones won't give long service because garters will strain and stretch them until the threads are weak. And the latter never will be one hundred per cent neat and trim.

Wear heels so high that your body is thrown completely out of line. Choose fairly low ones for walking, of course. Then, for evening and afternoon, find some that are gracefully high, but not high enough to spoil your posture. There is the right heel height for every woman. Search until you find one that is perfect for you.

Consider spending almost all of your wardrobe allowance on dresses and suits and economize on accessories. An inexpensive dress and truly fine accessories make a smarter outfit than a high-priced dress and mediocre hat, shoes, bag and gloves.

Arrive at a sale three days after it has been announced. Get there the first day, and get there early. By following this system, many a girl is able to keep on hand a suppl of fine cosmetics she would not have been able to afford otherwise.

114,000 Indians Live In Canada

OTTAWA, April 16.—The mines and resources department Friday quashed the popular belief that Indians of Canada are a vanishing race. While their numbers have varied during the last 30 years, declining from 110,000 in 1904 to 104,000 in 1924, latest returns show there are now approximately 114,000 Indians resident in the dominion.

Life Goes On!

By Nellie McClung

(Copyright Reserved)

WHEN William White, at work in his garden, heard his wife calling him, he dropped his hoe and went in, making some excuse to his daughters for his appearance. He couldn't very well tell them their mother had called him, for their mother had been dead and buried for a week. The girls would think he was going queer. But he could not ignore the call either. No one ever called him "William" in just that tone, and he couldn't let Minnie call in vain—no matter what the girls thought. After all, Minnie meant more to him than anyone. Dead or alive Minnie had the first claim on him. It was "William" she called for when the pain was heaviest on her. She often said he was better than any doctor. And "William" was the last word on her lips. She seemed to know when he was sitting beside her in the hospital, and after she could no longer speak, he thought he felt a little pressure in her hand. So he stayed every night until the nurses put him out. Not exactly that, but they had a way of bustling around getting ready for the night, and letting him know he should go. But he slipped into the sun room, in the dark, and stayed there. Some way he felt Minnie would know he was near. He couldn't leave her to strangers—even nice kind girls like the nurses.

He thought the girls didn't know that he spent the last two nights in the sun room, but one of them came for him just as the dawn was breaking. . . . He knew Minnie would rouse herself at the last. She never went to town even, without running out to the field to say goodbye to him. Minnie never forgot anything like that. She always remembered his birthday, and his mother's birthday, and their wedding-day and everything.

LOOKED STRONG AGAIN

And when the end came, she suddenly looked strong again and well; and even young, and her hand closed on his. He knew what she meant. It was Minnie's way of telling him she was just going on ahead, and she wouldn't forget. Of course he couldn't tell that to anyone. They would think he was just an old man, gone queer, after his wife died.

People thought it odd to see the old man so composed at the funeral. The girls hung around him tenderly, saying, "Now father, you must be brave—remember she is better off."

He took it all without protest, but William White knew better. Minnie had not wanted to leave him. She didn't want to be better off. He and Minnie had talked about it many times. . . . He remembered what she said. So when he heard her calling he always came, because she just might get back. Some people are gone when they're dead—you know they are gone. But Minnie was different. . . . Even the grave couldn't blot out Minnie.

SPRING AN ADVENTURE

The Spring came in the old man's garden. Spring had always been an adventure to them. The grape-hyacinths, and crocuses were out, and the buds were getting bigger on the cherry trees. There was digging to be done, and raking and burning. Minnie had always struck the match for the bonfires. She loved a fire, and said she liked the way some of the saints had gone to Heaven—in a chariot of fire! That was the right way—to go out in a burst of glory. She said she would like to go streaking up the sky like that!

He laughed to himself as he thought about the time they fought the fire that nearly got away from them. Her eyebrows had been singed. She said she had been thinking of having them plucked anyway. Minnie had always an answer. . . . He must not let the girls see him laughing. He had thought lately they were watching him from behind the blinds. Sometimes he wished they would go along to their own homes and leave him. It was good of them to come over every day, but he did not need them, and he felt that if Minnie did come back it would be nicer if he were just alone, out in the garden where she would expect to find him on a nice day like this, and Easter Sunday coming so close. Of course . . . people do not come back from the dead. . . . David said, 'I shall go to him, but he will not come to me,' . . . speaking of his little boy. Still that was a long time ago, and a child wouldn't have the desire to come back that Minnie would have. Up in Heaven there would be everything to attract a child, what with angels and bands, and music, and big processions and harps. . . .

FEELING OF IMPATIENCE

Just then he saw the minister driving into the yard . . . and a feeling of impatience came over him. Not that he did not like Mr. Peters. No one could have spoken more beautifully the day of the funeral. But he wanted to get on with the digging. She had bought a lot of new bulbs last Fall which he must get in. She always liked to have all the bulbs in by Easter. Well, he'd go on until he was called. Elizabeth would soon be out after him—hot foot. She would be glad of an excuse to get him away from his work . . . always nagging at him not to get overheated, telling him he was not as young as he used to be, and he must be careful. . . .

He went on digging as hard as he could, with a real enjoyment in every stroke. The ground now, the soil, the good earth had comfort in it . . . Mother Earth . . . No wonder we call it Mother Earth. God's good gift to man . . . Minnie had often said she had no dread of it . . . it would lie easy on her . . . and she knew she would hear the music of the rain above her head, and the song of the grass growing. . . .

WOULD HAVE TO GO IN

Just then he saw the Millers and the Stevens drive in the gate, and he knew he would have to go in . . . Too bad they had to come on a nice day like this when he was feeling so strong and keen at his work. Elizabeth would be all apologies because he was not dressed. Usually she hailed him in at three o'clock for the neighbors had been good to drop in since Minnie went, thinking he was lonesome . . . He'd go on digging as long as he could. They could have their visit with each other. The spade seemed to lift the earth itself. Suddenly he heard her call, strong and clear!

Dropping his spade, he turned and saw her. She came down the path with all her old energy and radiance.

"You're young, Minnie," he cried in surprise. "How does it come you're so young?" He knew then that he had never doubted she would come!

Minnie laughed and kissed him. "You're young yourself, William," she said, looking at him with her eyes sparkling.

STOOD TOGETHER

They stood together under the cherry tree they had planted the first year they were married—the cherry tree on which the buds were breaking.

"Will you stay with me, Minnie?" he asked at last. "I know you will if you can, but can you stay?"

Her hand tightened on his, a young hand firm and warm. "You are coming with me—we'll never part now, William. It's all true—all we ever hoped. Did you see the people driving in?" she asked. "I wish I could tell them. The front of the house is full of cars—and the house is full of the saddest people you ever saw—all the neighbors. They think you are dead, William, just as they thought I was dead a month ago. Listen, William, and we can hear them. Mr. Peters is reading. Lovely words, great promises, clear as sunshine, but they only hope they are true. They wouldn't look like that if they believed them."

The words came clear through the open windows.

"Let not your heart be troubled. . . . I am the resurrection and the life! . . . If any man believe on Me, he shall never die! For we know if this earthly tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens!"

But the people who looked out of the windows saw nothing but the old man's garden, full of sunshine, cherry trees coming into bloom, and a spade still stuck in the ground, just as he left it the day he was stricken!

What To Do

Please tell me who pays the following expenses of a wedding: The gifts to the bridesmaids; flowers to the bride and bridesmaids; the invitations and the reception following the wedding?

MISS H. R. K.

Answer—The bride's family pays for the bride's trousseau; the invitations or announcements; the decorations of the house and church; the wedding reception, and the bride's gifts to her attendants. The flowers for the bride's attendants are usually considered a part of the church decorations and as such are also paid for by the bride's family. The wedding expenses of the bridegroom are his gift to the bride, the bride's bouquet, the marriage license, wedding ring, corsages for his mother and the bride's mother, a car for himself and the best man, the clergyman's fee and his gifts to the ushers and best man. But from the time he and his bride start on their honeymoon he pays all expenses.

Heart-To-Heart Talks - - - - By Kathleen Norris

POLICY OF LOVE, PATIENCE AND PROTECTION ADVISED FOR PARENTS OF GIRL WHO WAS INDISCREET AT COLLEGE—A WOMAN MAY PROPOSE IF SHE IS CLEVER ABOUT IT

The girl admitted that on three separate occasions she had had serious love affairs with fellow students. She was amused by her parents' stupefied reception of this news and said, "Darlings, don't be provincial!"

A CERTAIN girl who is attending college some forty miles from home, and living in a sorority house, was questioned by her affectionate father and loving mother recently when she was at home for a week-end. They had heard something that made them uneasy, and they wanted reassurance.

The girl seemed surprised at their concern and at once admitted frankly that on three separate occasions she had had serious love-affairs with fellow students. Upon their stupefied reception of this news she broke in with an amused, "Mother, dad, darlings, don't be provincial!"

They tried to talk to her, but as the father's letter states, they did not seem to find anything to say. She'd always been a good little daughter, merry and popular and anxious to please everyone.

"And if we didn't stress moral advice when she went to college," writes her father, "it was because we felt that all her life had been a lesson in morality and conventionality and manners, for Jean. I don't know that her mother ever told her any exact rules about her conduct with boys, any more than she ever told her not to pick pockets or scratch people's faces. It seemed understood. Even in high school boys liked Jean, and we felt that she had her own dignified little ways of handling them. Now we're knocked silly. My wife's prostrated, and we don't know what to do. She's still Jean, pretty and loving and the light of our eyes. I've a married daughter by a first marriage, and my wife a son by her first husband, but this child is the only one who belongs to us both. What shall we do and what can we do? Jean's quiet attitude, her sophistication, her confidence in herself are limitless.

"But our faith in her is destroyed. To both of us it seems impossible to go on quietly, welcoming her home when she comes home, entertaining this beau or that, suspecting all the time that the young people's relationship is anything but what it ought to be. She is twenty-two. Can we say anything, do anything to clear up this situation? And if, as seems likely, her present young man turns out to be the one she wants to marry, should he be told of her past?

"I'm writing you in the first shock of this discovery. I'd be grateful for anything that I can say to my wife to comfort her."

BIOLOGICAL MYSTERY

This heart-broken father and mother can't take any steps now. Just how such a couple managed to have a child who is completely devoid of moral feeling is one of those biological mysteries that will puzzle us to the end of the chapter. A freakish distribution of ions or electrons or whatever else makes us has resulted in this odd departure from the safe and decent and indeed sensible path, and Jean has followed it as naturally as a baby follows a hurdy-gurdy.

Jean probably will marry soon and may even make a steady and devoted wife and mother. Her record won't help her self-respect, ever, and the time may come when she will bitterly regret it, as a man might regret the memory that he cheated on college exams, or forged checks in his mother's name, or was cruel to baby cats and rabbits, when he was a boy.

Hidden racial weaknesses do break out in us now and then, and Jean is probably pretty weak sexually at an emotional period that usually comes earlier in a girl's life, and vain enough to believe that she can make a success even of moral failure. What she has done unquestionably will lower her standards for her entire life. To these episodes she someday will refer in her own mind with an impatient, "Well, I was nothing but a fool kid!"

That quite young girls ARE fools in these matters, and that the early teens must be watched and guided and even policed, is a fact that all good mothers know. Jean would not be so complacent if she realized that her easy surrender to the importunities of young boys is really a sign of an arrested development. But ordering girls out into snow storms has gone out with bathing stockings and eleven-course dinners; and the only policy for this good father and his wife to adopt is one of protection and love and patience.

MOTHER'S NOVEL IDEA

Any mother who has several school-age children and lives in a small house or apartment ought to have one room called "The Commons," as a very smart Pennsylvania mining-town mother has. She wrote me about it years ago. She took the parlor, a room that was rarely used, and had an air-tight stove installed there. She had four lockers built on one wall, and some shelves for books and games on the other. The room was further furnished with a long table and comfortable chairs, and a basin with faucets, towels, brush and comb. This was done at small expense, for a brother who had once been a carpenter did the building. She and the children did the painting.

The three boys and the girl go into this room when they return from school. They put their homework on the table, spread their wet clothes to dry, put on house clothes and slippers. Their rubbers, coats, hats, pencils, schoolbooks never are taken out of this room, except perhaps to be brushed and aired. The stove burns up all the rubbish of exercise papers and gum wrappers, etc.

"Before the Commons had been operating one week I knew I never could do without it," the mother wrote. "The nervous strain that it saves me and the children, and dad, too, is simply incalculable. I've fixed him a comfortable corner in the dining room with his radio chair and lamp, and I can chat with him while I do the dishes. No mud, no lost books, no search for coats and hats goes on upstairs. Everything that belongs to the children except their beds is centered in the Commons.

"I like a parlor for company as well as most women," she continues, "but everyday peace and comfort mean more to me than occasional showing-off. If we have company now we make it informal and play bridge after dinner in the dining room."

It always does my heart good when any woman solves her problem in an original way like this. There are so many ways out of uncomfortable or unsatisfactory situations, and so few of us have ingenuity or courage enough to find them!

Della, of Texas, wants to know if she may ask a young man to marry her. Certainly she may—only without his knowing it!

He's an army lieutenant who was stationed in her neighborhood for a time and paid her marked attention. They danced; they picnicked; they laughed and joked and flirted; they thoroughly liked each other. And then he was ordered away.

Now, from a town some miles distant, he is continually sending Della indirect messages. Friends tell her that he always asks for her most particularly; always recalls with pleasure the time when he and she were friends. But he doesn't write Della and he doesn't hire a car and come over to call. So what can she do?

Well, I think she can write him, and ask him to write her. I think she can wait until some especially pleasant event comes along and invite him to be her escort. If, as I suspect, he is shy and lonely, he'll respond instantly. If he's at all smart, he'll know immediately that Della likes him and wants the friendship to go on to something more.

If he doesn't rise to this friendly bait he wouldn't rise to an out-and-out offer of marriage.

In a very charming letter a brand-new mother in Rhode Island wants a suggestion for a name for a small girl whose last name is Southey. With such a pretty last family name the choice shouldn't be hard. The father inclines toward Joan or Eileen; the mother likes Brigetta, or would like to name the baby for her own mother Julia. Two young aunts are all for Diana or Patricia, and an uncle, Laurence, wants the baby called Laure—they all dislike Laura—and says she can be the mascot of his college eleven. One set of grandparents is all for Betty-Lou, and the other set has chosen Harriet Judge Roberts Southey as the title of the innocent and unconscious seven-pounder.

WHY NOT SHEILA?

Well, I'd say not Joan or Patricia. We've too many of those now. Practically every other girl was named Patricia a few years ago, and the Joans made a close second. Just as when I was young the quaint old English name of Dorothy took the nurseries by storm, and the last generation would have Nancy or nothing.

Margaret is a beautiful name, and fits all girls, and Julia is positively my favorite name. But since Dad favors an Irish name like Eileen and mother another Irish name like Brigetta, why not call this precious and prized little person Sheila, which is Irish for Julia? Sheila Southey is so beautiful a name that if they don't use it for their little heroine, I'll certainly use it some day for one of mine!

takes his MILK ..right on the JOB!

CAUGHT red-handed, by the cameraman—while taking his daily glass of MILK right on the job at one of the new buildings now being erected in Edmonton. And — the boss knows all about it — knows, too, that this extra glass of MILK is the stuff that makes the saws and hammers ring. Why not see that your men in the shop, office or factory are able to have milk every working day at ELEVEN and again at FOUR?

The extra glass of milk helps happier, healthier staffs to do better work. Illness figures drop — more work is done. MILK is food and drink, without equal and without substitute.

BEYOND THE BORDER OF CHANCE - - - By Edwin Balmer

THERE is a supreme question. It is so primitive a puzzle that it troubles savage tribes. The earliest magic was made in an attempt by barbarous man, to deal with it.

It presents so advanced a problem that, today, scholars and philosophers search for a surer answer. The question is, simply: Are we creatures of chance or of plan? Is it stupid, implacable accident which determines what we do and what may be done to us, or is there, above us, some sensible, deliberate design that endows life with purpose and dignity?

David Freeward was, prior to the events about to be recorded, a thoroughly modern-minded, sophisticated and quite self-contained young man. He was a graduate of Yale and a resident of New York. He was twenty-seven, a bachelor, living comfortably and satisfactorily on 72d St. near Fifth Ave., and making his living in the lower end of Manhattan, Wall street. But he was not a broker or a customer's man. He was a junior partner in a firm which collected and published figures to show financial trends.

The figures were always correctly calculated, but, of course, at any moment an unpredictable disaster, such as drought or flood or a sudden strike or war scare, could and did completely upset all calculations.

David was a deep skeptic of any sort of intelligent design. We were, in his estimation, wholly creatures of chance.

He picked up his phone a few minutes before three o'clock on an April afternoon to call his friend Sedgewick and suggest that he get out of a certain steel stock before the market closed. He dialed Sedgewick's number but by one of those accidents which are now extremely rare with automatic phones, he got what is called a "crossed wire" somewhere in the maze of switchboards and he overheard a man and a woman talking.

"It's happened," the woman was saying. "No one can do anything about it."

"No," the man agreed.

"Of course, I'll go at once."

"There's no train till five-thirty."

"I know," the woman said.

She was a young woman, David now recognized and she had a remarkable quality in her voice which caught at one's feelings.

Of course, she was under unusual emotion, something most distressing to her had just happened. David wanted to learn what it was, but neither the man nor the girl mentioned it again. The man's name was Frank. She so addressed him, once; he called her Evelyn, twice. Manifestly they knew each other intimately; what concerned one concerned the other. But they were not married, David thought; he was not overhearing a talk between a man and wife.

The man said: "I'll surely see you at the train." The girl did not reply. One of them hung up, and there was silence.

COULD SHE BE EVELYN?

David, who was alone in his office, sat holding the instrument through which he had intruded into the moment of another. He did not want the intrusion ended, but the voices were gone, lost in the limbo of interludes never to be regained.

He recollected whom he had been calling and why, and he hastily dialed the number but he was a few seconds late to catch Sedgewick, who had just gone out. Before David located him, the stock exchange had closed, and as Sedgewick was carrying five thousand shares of the steel stock and as it was down two points when the market opened the next morning, the accident of the crossed wire and David's distraction at hearing the girl's voice, cost Sedgewick ten thousand dollars.

Another score on the side of blind chance.

But before it could be marked up, occurred the coincidence.

David left the office, as customarily, a few minutes after five o'clock and went to Wall street subway station where he got aboard a northbound train. It was crowded, of course; and the people, who were standing, swayed and swung when the car lurched on the curves.

The motion of the train and the pack of people pressed David against a girl at his right, and then, when he regained his balance they thrust her upon him. Both pretended to ignore the contact, as well bred New Yorkers do. They had been flung upon each other, mutely, three times before David really saw the girl.

Leaving Fourteenth street, David retreated into position to see her. Already he had realized that she was a particularly pleasing person. She was a year or so over twenty, he guessed, and she was slender and of nice height, a little above his shoulders.

Her hair was dark, not black, but of deep, deep auburn; and her brows were of the same deep auburn over grey eyes. They were large eyes and they were of that gray which is warm and considerate and thoughtful. She was absorbed in some serious consideration, just now; apparently something had happened, very recently, which greatly disturbed her

David recollected the telephone conversation, which he had overheard, and he thought: Could you be Evelyn?

She was swung further away and turned half around, and he caught the clear, even line of her profile

He noticed on the floor, at her feet, a small travelling bag bearing the initials, E. M.

The train was slowing for Grand Central and she stooped and picked up her bag. She turned to the door and David, after allowing two or three others to push ahead of him, found himself following her out of the car. This was not his station and, two minutes ago, he had not the slightest intention of getting out at Grand Central. Never before in his life had he done anything like this—follow a girl whom he had happened to encounter.

She climbed the stairs to the railroad station and, after glancing at the train boards beside the platform gates, she selected one marked 5:30.

Several people were passing through the gate and a man was waiting there.

He was a tall, good-looking, well dressed young man, and he was peering about anxiously, impatiently until suddenly he separated the girl from the passing throng.

"Evelyn!" he called out with relief, and he hurried to her and took her in his arms.

Embraces are privileged at a train gate. An embrace means less there than in other places. David realized this and also that a friend feels particularly privileged when something has happened to distress a girl.

David recollected the telephone conversation—and he thought "Could you be Evelyn?"

The fellow kissed her, and she let him. Then she disengaged herself but she accompanied him towards the train.

"Tickets?" the gateman demanded.

Frank showed a ticket. Two? David could not discern. He could not determine, therefore, whether Frank also was making the journey.

Unprovided with a ticket, David dropped back from the gate, and now she was gone. The end of that episode, the end of Evelyn Whoever-she-was, forever.

The trainboard offered New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, Greenfield, White River Junction a dozen other New England towns as her possible destination. Twice today he had crossed her life—or she had crossed his—and now it was over.

Curious to have come upon her—out of all the millions in Manhattan—after having happened to hear her voice . . . Curious coincidence.

SEES HER PROFILE AGAIN

Coincidence would not do to designate the next link in the chain of events. No, an explanation of the third contact, on the score of coincidence, was woefully inadequate.

It did not happen until almost two weeks later.

During the interval, thought of the girl recurred to him frequently and at surprising, unsummoned occasions. He would find himself suddenly "seeing" some aspect of her when he was looking at somebody else.

His friend Rowena Carlisforth had returned from Aiken and, as usual, a hostess had placed him beside Rena at dinner. When Rowena turned to speak to the man on the other side, David "saw" the clear, pleasing profile of "Evelyn."

She really was not much like Rowena (or Rowena was not much like her) but the suggestion was there; and he sat wondering again about that strangely-encountered girl named Evelyn and where, and to what trouble she had gone.

Someone said, "Have you done it, Dave?"

"What?" he enquired.

"Been to the top of the tall ones—the Empire State or the Radio Building. I tell you it's more than a tourists' thrill. You ought to do it."

"I will," David promised indefinitely, hardly thinking about it.

Rena waited a moment, so that she spoke to him alone, and said, "I've meant to go up sometime. I think it will be tomorrow."

David recognized that she was offering him a date. "Have lunch with me tomorrow," he said. "We'll do it together."

They did it; luncheon together on Fifty-ninth street, then the top of the tower of the Empire State

There was wind up there, so they stood close together and he held her arm firmly in his grasp. She was fairly tall but she had no real weight to her, he felt, as the wind blew on them.

Together they gazed upon millions—literally millions—of homes. City homes; two rooms, three rooms together; four or five frequently; a few larger. Many smaller; thousands of couples shared, each couple a single room.

What held them to those homes? What held them to life? Each other. Two, you knew, was the unit that multiplied made the city, made the nation; made and remade life. Not one alone. To be part of this, to belong to this and most especially to become any part of the future, you had to be one of two together; a man and a girl, married.

David spoke no word of this to the girl with him, he merely felt it and imagined that she felt it too, as he clasped her close to him against the sweep of the wind upon them. They had ceased minutes ago to point out to each other towers and steeples they identified.

"Like it?" he said, looking down at her.

"A lot," she answered and caught her breath a bit as she looked up at him. He thought, "I'll ask you to marry me," but all he said was, "Ready to go down?"

They travelled to the street together, and the wind was blustery there. Directly in front of the building a gust blew Rowena almost about and something struck, stingingly, on David's cheek. It was a scrap of cardboard which dropped and caught in the opening of his coat and lodged between his coat and waistcoat.

He picked it out, glancing at it, and saw at once what it was—one of those coupons passed out by a street photographer to a person whose picture he had just snapped.

If one wanted the picture of himself, he accepted the coupon, filled in his name and address, enclosed a quarter and mailed it to the photographic studio. If one did not wish the picture, he did not accept the coupon and the cameraman threw it away.

This, evidently, was a ticket that had been thrown away, and David "should" have dropped it. The fact was, he did not drop it.

Standing there in the wind, with Rowena beside him, he thrust the coupon in his pocket. After he parted from Rena and had returned to his office, he came on the scrap of cardboard again and out of an impulse of curiosity—as he then called it—he wrote on the coupon his own name and address, enclosed a quarter and mailed it to the studio.

On the second morning, he received at his office from the studio of the street photographer a small but clear and excellent portrait of a girl as she had been snapped on Fifth avenue near the Empire State building.

The girl was, beyond the slightest doubt, "Evelyn."

He was alone in his office and he sat staring at the little likeness, his pulse suddenly and very strangely hurried. At what?

The mere mathematics of the occurrence was alone sufficient to startle him. Computations of the "chance" of this "happening" ran through his mind.

The original incident of course occurred accidentally; he simply happened to have overheard the voice on the phone. Then, the chance that he would encounter the girl on her way to the train was a calculable condition. The odds against it were one in a hundred thousand; or they might have been as great as one in a hundred thousand; or as one in two hundred thousand; or they might have been as great as one in a million. Yet, the odds could be expressed in figures.

Now, if he had merely met the girl again—if he had happened upon her in another subway train or on a bus or on the street—he still could represent the chance by some sensible figure. But the actual event defied calculation.

David felt himself suddenly hurried past the frontiers of chance, he felt himself, together with this girl, whose little likeness lay before him drawn deep into the domain of Plan, and it profoundly excited him.

Tonight he was to go to see Rowena again and he had thought that tonight he would ask her to marry him.

Now he gazed down at the picture.

"No," he answered the question stirring within himself. "No, not Rena."

Another question rose to replace that to which he had replied.

"Who?" this question asked him. "Who, then? Who?"

This he answered not positively but with another question as he gazed at the little likeness.

"You?" he said.

How could he find her? He wondered during the next days. Should he search? If so, how and where?

A hunt for her, when he had no hint of her whereabouts must be futile; and more than that, David believed it unnecessary. He became completely confident that something else in connection with her was sure to happen to him.

Something sudden, surprising, pleasent and completely unforeseen. This feeling endowed his days with a constant expectation that was agreeably exciting. But a week passed with nothing; another week; a third; a fourth.

ESCAPES FIGURES BY FLYING

David's escape from figures was in flight. All week long, he figured, computed, analyzed and tabulated data and statistics, prices, profits, physical properties. Tangible things, all of them. Then he washed his mind and his soul, clean and clear of them in flight.

The more material the things he had tackled during the week, the more he sought the immaterial—like flying with the clouds.

He had a little airplane of his own which he kept in an airport in Westchester; and on this particular Saturday afternoon — it was late in June—the clouds came in their favorite forms. The great, glistening white "woolpack" clouds of a calm, sunny summer day.

He jumped into his plane, pointed into the breeze and climbed to the clouds. He entered one, was blinded for an instant and came out in a cavern, roofed, mailed, gigantic; a white hall of Titan, a veritable grotto of the gods!

Not the self-same gods and heroes he had happened upon before. At one visit, Siegfried had signalled and Brunhilde halted her swift, white horse. At another, Priam appeared; and the "topless tower of Ilium."

David had attempted, weeks ago, to save in words some of the wonder of these flights:

"There are tall Valhalla's halls,
There are the towers of Troy,
And Helen watching from the
Achilles' proud convoy."

His friend, Arthur Winburn, had happened upon the sheet of paper with the verse and, saying nothing to David he had published the lines in his newspaper column, and had written also of David's flights but had not mentioned his name nor described David except as "a statistician."

David had never meant the verse for publication, even anonymously; he had never meant it for anyone but himself — and perhaps one other person, somewhere, sometime who, he hoped, might like it.

EVELYN AGAIN AFTER CRASH

The wind had changed. David noticed it first in the clouds, which flattened and began closing their chasms. He inspected the ground and saw where he was. Over the mist was blowing; fog.

David flew for home and found himself in fog. The ground everywhere was gone. Dropping a bit, he grazed a hilltop and climbed quickly; when he descended again, the swish of tree-tops at his wheels sent him up once more and he circled cautiously, searching for a "hole." Meanwhile his gauge reminded him that, not having prepared for an extended flight, his fuel was nearly spent.

The fog only increased and David groped through it for more than an hour. When his gauge warned him that he could maintain flight for perhaps five minutes more, he explored below, established that he was over a forest and climbed again. If he jumped here and let his ship go, there seemed small chance of injury to others, so he fastened on his parachute, cut his switch and "bailed out." Dropped. Through a count of ten he fell; and then pulled the cord.

Savagely, but reassuringly, the straps jerked him; the plop of the parachute spreading was like a pistol. He floated in the fog, gently swinging, and he heard his ship crash into the forest far below.

Then, all at once, his feet were in leafy branches. He scraped through them and was flung to the ground.

How long he lay stunned and confused he did not know. He became conscious of a voice calling, a girl's voice, "Hello! Hello!"

"Hello," he answered, and he caught a quick lilt of relief as the voice replied, "You are the flyer?"

"I'm the flyer."

"Are you hurt?"

"No. I had a parachute." He was freeing himself from it.

"Was—anyone hurt?"

"No one. I was flying alone," David replied.

"Keep calling so I can find you," the girl said.

He could hear the soft sounds of her steady progress as she pushed through the underbrush.

He stepped into a little open space and, at the end of it, saw leaves thrust aside.

A girl emerged from the leaves and stood before him—a breathless and lovely girl who gazed at him and halted before him. He stared at her face as she looked him over, and he was aware of the rise and fall of her small bosom.

"You aren't hurt!" she exclaimed.

"No, not at all . . . You—hurried," he said, and it struck him, even at that moment, as a strange and inadequate remark, but he was extraordinarily excited

For his perception, or his imagination, played with him, or this girl was "Evelyn." She was without hat and she had a thin, simple summer dress, and she had been hurrying to him, and also he had caught her breathless both from her haste and her concern over him. It all made her lovelier than he had remembered, or dreamed, Evelyn, but it was she.

"Yes, I ran at first," she said. "You see, I heard you flying in the fog. I heard you feeling for some landing place; then I heard you climb—and crash."

"Yes; the plane crashed," David said

"I hoped it was only the plane; and you had a parachute. But I didn't know—'till you answered."

"You called several times before I answered?"

"I thought you were killed," she said.

"Then I was out for a while, I guess."

"Sure you're all right now? You don't need to—rest?"

"You live near here?"

"The house is hardly two hundred yards away; on the edge of the woods. Think you can reach it?"

"Your house?" David said. He was not thinking as to whether he could reach it; he was thinking: "If she lives here and she's Evelyn, it wasn't chance that the fog came and the fuel failed. Oh, this—this is far beyond chance."

"My father's house," she replied.

"I can get to it," David assured her and she turned, leading him to a dimly discerned path through the trees.

TELLS HER OF MEETINGS

The house, which he entered, was small—little more than a cottage, but its main room was large and pleasant. It had a broad, stone fireplace and old andirons upon which fagots were laid. An iron crane hinged against the stone and a kettle hung from the crane. Well-filled bookshelves made one wall, and there was a piano open and with music upon it.

David instantly liked this room, and whoever lived here. As he looked about, he listened, but there was no sound or stir elsewhere in the house. He was alone with this girl who had discovered him and who was so strangely linked to him.

Did she know it? And was she, beyond any doubt, that girl?

He realized that he was staring at her.

"Sit down, please," she said, without any offence, "and rest."

"Rest?" said David. "I don't want to rest."

"You don't feel—shaken now?"

"Shaken?" he repeated and did not otherwise deny it for he was shaken, but not as she meant.

"You're cold?" she asked him, for he was quivering.

"Cold? No."

"It feels damp," she said, and she stooped to the hearth, struck a match and lighted the twigs below the fagot.

He watched her hands, slim and white and pretty at their little preoccupation. She wore no ring, he noticed.

"Frank is here?" he asked suddenly.

"Frank?" she looked about and up at him. "No. Not now . . what do you know about Frank?"

"He came up with you in April, didn't he?"

She arose very slowly, the color drained from her face. "Yes, he came up but not with me. He came after my mother died."

"Oh," said David. "Forgive me." But he proceeded—he had to go on, now. "That was what had happened that no one could do anything about. You see, you were saying that, when I first heard your voice."

"I don't—understand."

"I was in New York. I took up the phone that afternoon and I heard a girl — you — speaking to 'Frank.' He called here — you — 'Evelyn.' 'It' had just happened, and you were taking the train. You are 'Evelyn,' aren't you? And that Evelyn, too?"

"I'm Evelyn," she said. "I'm that Evelyn . . . but how did you know, just hearing over the phone?"

"I took the subway that day a little after five, and there you were beside me."

"You were beside me, and I thought—I felt that you were she I followed you to the train and saw you meet 'Frank' and heard him call you 'Evelyn.' Then I went away . . . Do you remember me at all?"

She met his eyes quite steadily. "No," she said, honestly, not unkindly.

"Not at all?"

"Not at all," she replied to him and added quietly, "That day, I had just heard that my mother had been hurt."

"My name is David Freeward. I'm a statistician. I deal, really with very sober things. I'm considered a responsible sort of person. Please don't think I'm — shaken, when I show you this." His hand was in his breast pocket, and he took out the billfold and the little likeness. "Isn't this also you?"

ONLY CHILD IN FAMILY

She took it from him, her fingers touching his. She gazed at the picture and then up at him again.

"How did you get it?" she asked.

"I didn't get it; it came to me."

"Came to you? How?"

He told her, watching her while she looked down at the little likeness and then up at him during the telling: "You see?" he said at the end. "That followed my overhearing you, and then being beside you in the crowd. And now, flying blind and with my fuel gone, I came down here, and you found me. You see now? Oh, don't you see?"

She was meeting his eyes no more. She had been holding the little picture of herself but now she laid it down and he could not decide whether he had frightened her.

"You said," she asked at last "you are a statistician?"

"Yes."

"I'll get water," she suddenly decided, moving away from him.

"Water?"

"For the kettle."

It was for escape, he knew, as she went out, but she returned with a pitcher from which she filled the kettle. She swung the crane over the fire and immediately disappeared again.

She was gone so long that David became certain that he had frightened her.

He realized that he had built somewhat, at least, upon the feeling that the evidence of Plan must have displayed itself in some way to her. But it had not. She had known nothing, felt nothing in respect to him. She had not even recollected him from their encounter in the subway train.

She reappeared with a tray which she placed on a low stand beside him. He saw that her hands, as she laid down the tray, were trembling a little but she was not actually frightened.

"You ought to eat something," she said.

She had brought cold meat and bread and butter; and salad in a bowl, huge strawberries and clotted cream. She had brought two plates, two cups and saucers. He swung out the crane, lifted the kettle and poured the boiling water into her teapot. Then they sat opposite each other, the little stand between them.

"Father usually is here but tonight he will be late," she said. He's a doctor . . . I've been coming up each week-end since mother died."

"You're the only daughter?"

"The only child," she said. (So Frank was not her brother.) "It was terribly sudden about mother. An accident. Father and she" — she stopped.

She had been looking down, serving him, and he had been watching her hands. For a moment their eyes met.

"They were in love, you were going to say," David encouraged her.

"Yes. They reminded me so often of Matthew Arnold's poem, 'Dover Beach.' Do you know it?"

"'The sea is calm tonight,'" David repeated. "'Ah, love, let us be true to one another! For the world—'"

He waited and she proceeded—"'which seems to lie before us like a land of dreams, has really neither joy, nor love, nor light . . . nor peace.' The poet meant, unless one makes it for another, by caring so much—and being true—as they cared and as they were."

HIS POEM SET TO MUSIC

She looked away and now David knew that he had never frightened her. He had come into a broken household where great love had been. He thought of this girl born to that love and brought up by it and forever incapable, therefore, of putting up with less in herself.

"What do you do in New York?" he asked, as they talked of little things.

"I work in a book shop near the Battery. Law books."

"Besides that," said David, "you do—what?"

"I like to play and I try to write music," she admitted and now, as she studied him once more, he realized that she was making some difficult decision. She arose and went to her piano.

He saw her halt as if she doubted the resolution she had just made; then she sat at the piano and struck a chord.

From her fingers flowed a theme, stirring, exciting, majestic. It was full of feeling yet endowed with dignity. Suddenly her voice began to accompany it. She did not sing, she spoke, presenting the word theme of her music.

"There are tall Valhalla halls,
There are the towers of Troy!"

For an instant, David doubted his ears; then he sprang up

"And Helen, watching from the walls"

she finished,

"Achilles' proud convoy."

She stopped playing and her fingers fell from the keys. David stood over her but she did not look up.

"Where did you get that? Evelyn, where did you?"

"From you—didn't I?"

"From [illegible]"

"[illegible] Aren't you—the statistician?"

"I wrote it. I'm the statistician," he said and, recollecting, realized: "You got them, of course, from the newspaper. They were printed."

She looked up at him now and met his eyes. "But of all printed things—the millions and millions of printed things—I found yours and copied it, and tried to picture it in music. What you felt in your flights in the clouds."

She caught breath and he put his hands on her shoulders. She was trembling far more violently than before, but he knew that no fear was in her. It was her awe at the doings of Design which had brought him to her and her to him.

"I was working with your words," she whispered, "actually using your words and wanting to fly with you some day in the clouds, when I heard an airplane in the fog and I went out and called and you answered."

"You're not afraid," he said "You're not afraid at all."

"Of you?"

"Of how we're caught together. For we are caught together—we must be. There can't be Frank or any one else for you"

"There was never any one else for me."

"There couldn't be, as there was never any one else for me. Design would never do so much without holding something particularly wonderful for you and me."

POSTAGE STAMPS OF DENMARK

The Kingdom of Denmark, in Northern Europe, occupies the peninsula dividing the Baltic from the North Sea, and the first issue of postage stamps was made in 1851. There were stamps at first of two designs and square format; stamp No. 1, of Scott's listing, having the denomination "2 Rigsbank Skilling" on a white circle in the centre; the other general design (three variations) having the crown, above crossed swords, on a colored background enclosed in a circular wreath. These stamps were not perforated, and the 4s, brown, and 16s, violet, will also be found rouletted 11.

In 1864 a new design was introduced, with the letters "KGL.-POST.FRM." at the top of a white oval. These were perforated 12½ to 13 and were in turn replaced, in 1870, by a new design that remained in use until 1904. Stamps of this design were bi-colored; an outer decorative frame being separately printed. The denominations appear in white figures on a colored circle in the centre, with the name "Denmark", in white letters, in oval at the top. There are many interesting varieties in these issues, as well as those of perforation difference. "Inverted frame" varieties are identified in the upper-left corner, where a difference occurs in the position of the leaflets of the design when, in a few cases, sheets were fed into the press upside-down. Collectors are always watching for these varieties, which are scarce. A new design was added in 1882 and included in this issue, with the three lions on a white shield in the centre, and numerals of value in color, at each side, on white circles. Interesting "provisionals" appeared in 1904, being 4 ore, on 8 ore, and 15 ore on 24 ore.

The familiar design with the colored numerals on white oval, bottom-centre, and three wavy lines at either side, symbolical of the three waters separating the principal islands, first appeared in 1904, also one with portrait of King Christian IX (bearded), looking right. The 5, and 10 ore values of this latter type were re-engraved in 1905; the designs being much clearer and the decoration on the King's left breast being removed.

King Frederich VIII (full face) appears on the issue of 1907, and with certain provisionals of previous designs, was used, in addition to the 5 krone value of 1912 (large format, G.P.O. Bldg at Copenhagen), until 1913, when portrait (looking right) of King Christian X was introduced.

To commemorate the reunion of Northern Schleswig with Denmark in 1902, an issue of three designs showing Castle Kronborg, Sonderborg Castle, and Roskilde Castle, respectively as regards sequence of denomination, appeared; the 10, and 10 ore values being changed in color in 1921

Many provisional issues appeared until the commemorative issue, in 1924, of two portrait types to record the 300th anniversary of the postal service in Denmark. There were two stamps of each portrait, which showed the monarchs looking both right and left

More provisionals, and the Postal Jubilee Issue of 1926, marking the 75th anniversary of the introduction of postage stamps to Denmark (two designs, similar to first two types of 1851, but of ore currency) appear until the "Ship type", of 1927. These were lithographed with solid background, and were followed in 1930 by a new portrait of the King, in oval looking left, with posthorns (at top) and numerals of value (bottom), projecting at corners of the outer oval

The 1904 type, and ship type, were issued in 1933, engraved with background of crossed lines; higher values showing a portrait of King Christian X were also line-engraved. Some provisionals also appeared.

Stamps of this country are, generally, not expensive, and a fine showing may be made at little cost.

NEW POLITICAL MOVE IS MADE AT RED DEER

Committee Named to Organize Group for United Action

RED DEER, Alta., April 16.—A committee of nine was elected to arrange for united political action in the Red Deer constituency as the result of a meeting in the Elks hall here on Thursday evening.

Those named on the committee were R. A. Van Slyke, F. A. Stewart, C. A. Richardson, J. A. Arnot, H. B. Gibson, G. H. Best, H. W. Halliday and P. E. Graham, all of Red Deer, and J. M. McDonald, of Eckville. As soon after seeding as possible another meeting will be called.

H. B. Gibson, of Red Deer, who called the gathering, in opening said the meeting had no connection with any [illegible] and that the purpose was to [illegible] the constituency for united political action. J. A. Arnot was elected chairman of the meeting.

After some discussion the meeting adopted a resolution which read as follows:

DECLARE CONFIDENCE

"We, citizens of Red Deer and district, assembled in public meeting, desire to declare our confidence in our fellowmen and their ability to solve our social and economic problems in the highest interests of all citizens.

"We further declare our faith in the principles of democracy and that our problems can all be best worked out within the confederation in the spirit of unity, justice and equity to all the citizens of Canada.

"Whereas we [illegible] growing interest, with an ever increasing number of our citizens to organize for United action on the basis of our common citizenship;

FAVOR ORGANIZATION

"Therefore be it resolved that this meeting goes on record as favoring organization in the Red Deer constituency on a basis of united citizenship [illegible]

A committee of H. B. Gibson, J. A. Arnot, H. W. Halliday, Rev. D. White, Sm[illegible] and W. P. Code drafted the resolution.

Following the business of organization the meeting was addressed by E. W. Brunsden, Calgary, provincial secretary of the provincial unity council. Mr. Brunsden sketched the formation and activities of the council and hoped that the organization here would link up with the unity council.

The Dionne quintuplets will be 4 years old May 28, and they're becoming quite some young ladies—but they're still far from the age when they'll lose interest in that traditional favorite of childhood, the Easter rabbit. Here are, left to right, Cecile, Emilie, Marie, Annette and Yvonne, examining a felt bunny, and wondering perhaps about all the candy eggs they hoped to find around their nursery this Easter morning.

ONE KILLED AS WIND HITS EAST

OTTAWA, April 16.—A violent wind struck the Ottawa valley Thursday night, resulting in one death and damage to farm buildings [illegible] thousands of dollars. While working with his father in a sugar bush near Morewood, Ont., Stuart Carruthers, 10, was killed when a tree toppled over. There was no damage in Ottawa.

The okapi, curious animal of Africa, is considered by zoologists to be about 30,000,000 years behind the times. It resembles animals of the Miocene period.

Student Book Is Delayed By Binding Work

The Evergreen and Gold, student's year book of the University of Alberta, and rated as one of the finest publications of its kind on the continent, will be 10 days late in its release this year, due to difficulties in binding the edition.

The 300-page volume presents a complete pictorial and literary story of the year's activities of the university this year having over 1,500 subscribers. The late releasing of the book will necessitate mailing it to the major portion of the students as only first and second year students in the faculty of engineering will be attending university after next Saturday.

This is the first year the publication has been able to finance with a profit, the total cost being over $6,000.

MUSEUM YIELDS INDIAN AMULET OF RAINMAKERS

"Water Buster" Clan Sees Return Of Tribal Prosperity

NEW YORK, April 16 — Thirty years ago, the Water Buster clan of North Dakota's Hidatsa, or Gros Ventre Indian Tribe, lost possession of the Sacred Bundle, a "magic medicine" purported by them to promote rain and fertile soil. On January 14, in New York, elders of the old clan received back their sacred medicine from Dr. George G. Heye, head of the Museum of the American Indian, in a restoration ceremony in an attempt to block the threat of further drouth and destruction of their crops by grasshoppers.

This medicine, originally sold to a Presbyterian missionary and later resold to the Heye Foundation, will, the Water Busters hope, make the rains fall once more and insure productive crops.

F[illegible] Bear and Drags Wolf, two elders of the clan, will act as representatives. They will be accompanied by Arthur Mandan, chairman of the Indians' tribal council. Neither of the spokesmen has ever travelled so far from home. They speak nothing but their native tongue.

BUFFALO HORN TO BE TRADED

A sacred buffalo medicine horn, a relic which has been in the family of Foolish Bear for more than 200 years, will be presented to Dr. Heye in exchange for the Sacred Bundle.

John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, or a representative will attend this ceremony of restoration and act for the Office of Indian Affairs, according to the Department of Interior.

The Water Buster clan is one of several in the tribe whose present home is the Fort Berthold agency in North Dakota. The ceremonial rites of the Water Busters, as their name implies, have always centered around rain making and the production of plenteous crops. Until some 30 years ago their Sacred Bundle was the focal point of these religious observations.

The origin of the Sacred Bundle is lost in the mists of antiquity and legend. Its history has been traced back at least 200 years, but probably goes back before then. According to legend, the bundle contains two skulls of Thunderbird deities who decided to come down to earth long ago, one of them having chosen to be born of a Gros Ventre woman and the other of a woman member of the Shoshone tribe.

THUNDERBIRDS MAKE COMPACT

The legend then goes on to recall a bloody battle between the two tribes and of how the two Thunderbirds now turned human, made a compact that their skulls should be preserved and guarded by the Water Buster clan. This was done, and all went well until some time in the 1890s, when Slim Shin, senior member of the Water Buster clan and guardian of the Sacred Bundle, died. His death occurred at a time when government pressure and missionary zeal were being combined to put an end to so-called pagan rites among the Indians.

The Water Busters were afraid to practice their old ceremonies. The Sacred Bundle was neglected. Then in 1907 G. F. Wilson, a Pres[illegible] Wolf Chief, son of old Slim Shin, with a proposition to purchase the Bundle. Though not a Water Buster, but a Prairie Chicken (inheritance being through the maternal line) Wolf Chief decided to sell the Bundle to the missionary, who later resold it to the Heye Foundation, in whose museum it reposed until the negotiations undertaken by the Indian Office resulted in the present agreement for the Bundle's return in exchange for the buffalo horn.

LONDON LEADS IN NEW DEALS WITH INMATES

Marks Mental Effects From Fashions For Women in Institutions

By MOLLIE McGEE

LONDON, April 16—How much the care of woman's appearance contributes to her sanity is under investigation, and by no cold-blooded psychologist this time, but through the London county council.

Schools, hospitals and public institutions of every variety in this world metropolis come under the jurisdiction of this group which, far from being conservative and averse to innovations, has most advanced and up-to-date views and methods.

In one of the London county council's mental hospitals two women hairdressers are now permanently employed giving beauty treatments which include water-waving and henna applications, scalp massage, face massage, face packs, eyebrow trimming and wax treatment for removing hairs.

Nor does the interest of the august and humane council stop there. In several of the Old People's Homes—previously called workhouses—there are aged women time has bereft of all hair. These the council provides with wigs—and of their own choosing.

Visitors to the institutions are frequently surprised when they glimpse a proudly-held golden-yellow head among the hundreds crowned with more usual silver. The wigs are sent to the hairdressers and given up-to-the-minute coiffures several times a year at the council's expense.

FASHIONS FOR INMATES

Fashions in the Public Assistance Institutions (ex-workhouses) have been occupying no little attention at council meetings lately and the distinguished men and women who run the public affairs of London have had their little difficulties when they tried new styles on old figures. A fashion note specially written by an institution matron occupied a prominent position in the council's recently-issued annual report, and in tactful language gave an idea of slight hitches.

One paragraph mentions "the traditional women's shawl, so prominent in institutions previously, has now been replaced by colored cardigans, although a good many of the old women prefer the shawl. As the cardigan is comparatively a modern innovation for women's wear, considerable time must elapse before the cardigan will completely replace the shawl." Which means the council will have to go on buying shawls in spite of best intentions.

FASHION DIFFICULTIES

The fashion difficulties of the London County Council even extend into the realm of unmentionables. "Efforts made to modernize the old women's underclothing have not always been received with acclamation. But with continued patience and frequent gentle persuasion the majority of women now are wearing well-shaped 'interlock' stockinette garments and sateen slips instead of voluminous flannel and calico garments."

The matron's report closes however on quite a frivolous note. "I find the girlhood wish for a new hat still alive in the bosoms of our old girls." The matron then describes how hats are chosen by lottery. The inmate drawing "No. 1" having first choice among those sent in.

There are 14 women members of the London County Council which numbers 144 members all told. One reason given for its progressive ideas is that women have taken part in its discussions since 1909.

Other aspects of politics must be losing their appeal to women in England or perhaps the possibilities of advancement are not sufficiently advertised. There is a shortage of candidates for posts as party organizers and a special examination is to be held early in the new year. Women between 23 and 40 are eligible and the average salary is $1,000 to $1,250 per year. In the Conservative offices many responsible posts are held by women who began as organizers and at the present time Miss Marjorie Maxse is second in charge.

Basque Refugees Riot In England

HEXHAM, Northumberland, Eng., April 16 — Young Basques from Spain have more than a word for it when they become annoyed. In fact a group of refugees at the Larches, children's hostel here, said it with a miniature riot in protest against hostel regulations.

Captain T. P. Wilson, a former warden, said he was glad to see the last of them. Here's his reason: "The boys simply thrived on excitement and wanton destruction. They chased an assistant warden with daggers and bottles, hacked the walls and electric light fixtures, attacked the matron, broke every pane of glass and every piece of crockery, smashed the gas stove, broke fences and slashed plants and shrubs."

Five of the ringleaders were sent back to war-torn Spain.

Cat Cut Off Power

SYDNEY, New South Wales, April 16—Worst peak-hour power stoppage in Sydney for years occurred when a cat jumped on a high-tension bar, causing £500 ($2,000) damage in the switch room. The cat died.

MANY ASSISTED BY HOPE MISSION

Since September of 1937, an average of 133 families a month have been assisted by Hope Mission, according to figures released on Saturday by H. Edwardson, superintendent. This does not take into account the increase because of Christmas hampers in December. Requirements also have been varied, particularly clothing for adults and children and also bedding, furniture and food supplies.

Others have obtained meals or lodgings at the mission, many hundreds of single men and many women having been assisted.

Among those requiring emergency help have been some burned out families and an average of 25 a month have been helped owing to sickness in the home.

Doors of the Mission are open throughout the entire year. The Mission will be glad to receive clothing of all kinds, bedding, used furniture, provisions and other donations which will be of benefit [illegible]

Mme. J. J. Duggan, Musician, Dies at Edmonton Home

Widely known for her manifold musical activities and honored as one of the most progressive and accomplished among musicians of this city, Mme. J. J. Duggan died at her home on Friday evening, following an illness of more than two years.

MME. J. J. DUGGAN

The illness which had afflicted her became more acute during the last week. But on Friday she appeared to have taken a turn for the better. She was bright, appreciative of attentions and conversed with her family. Then a reaction set in and death came swiftly.

Last public appearance of Mme Duggan was as an adjudicator at a Peace River musical festival and shortly after her return from the north, she suffered the first symptoms of her fatal illness

VOCALIST OF DISTINCTION

A vocalist of distinction, a choral conductor of high attainments, and adjudicator of impeccable judgment and a former president of the Women's Musical club—serving three years in the presidential chair and continuing as chairman of the trust fund—she has left a legacy to the musical life of this city.

Success came early to Mme. Duggan, who, before her marriage was Bessie Evans.

Born in Wales in 1874 she showed an early love for music. In 1893 the world's fair was held at Chicago and among the musical competitors was the 19-year-old Bessie Evans. She startled the fair and the musical world by winning the contralto solo award.

SANG BEFORE QUEEN

On her return to the Old Country she enjoyed the distinction of singing her prize-winning solo before Queen Victoria and the entire court at Osborne. At the White House in Washington she also sang before President McKinley.

She studied music at the Royal Academy of Music in London, taking a three-year course under such famous masters as Randegger, Francis Korbay and the late Sir Johnstone Forbes-Robertson.

She was a member of the Royal Welsh Ladies' Choir and with this she toured this continent giving sometimes one and two performances a day.

On the occasion of crossing the ocean returning from this tour she sang "O Promise Me" from "Robin Hood." She was approached by a stranger, who asked her to sing it again. It transpired that the stranger was none other than the great composer, Reginald de Koven and he accompanied the then Bessie Evans at the piano, while she sang it again.

SANG AT CONCERTS

Following her return home she sang in concerts in England, Ireland and Scotland. As a member of the choir conducted by her father, she sang at Queen's hall, London, with Frangcon Davies, Maggie Davies and other well known artists. When, on one occasion she sang at Stratford, she was congratulated by Marie Corelli, the famous authoress.

In 1902 Bessie Evans was married

MUMPS DECLINE, CHICKENPOX UP M. H. O. REPORTS

Fewer cases of mumps were reported to the city health department this week, but scarlet fever and chickenpox were on the increase as compared to last week's figures, according to a report issued Saturday by Dr. G. M. Little, city medical health officer.

Classification of diseases follows, totals for this week and last week being given in that order: Scarlet fever, 11, 8; chickenpox, 17, 2; measles, 4, 2; mumps, 300, 325; meningitis, 0, 1; tuberculosis (pulmonary), 3, 1; totals, 335, 339.

Unemployed Will Meet On Sunday

Edmonton unemployed will hold a meeting on the market square Sunday at 1:30 p.m., when further plans of the Unemployed Federation will be put forward aiming at bringing about some changes in the present relief system. The suggested changes are already before the special committee of the legislature, contained in briefs previously presented by the unemployed.

Police Court

Because it was his first venture into the life of crime, Dannie Monroe, youth from the Vermilion district, was given two years' suspended sentence when he appeared for sentence before Magistrate A. H Gibson in police court Saturday on a charge of theft of two bridles from the station platform at Morinville.

On a second chance of stealing a ride on the train he was sentenced to serve one week in jail to date from the time of his arrest

The cadi pointed out that he was suspending sentence to give the youth a chance to go straight.

Furman Myers, appearing for sentence on a charge of fraud arising out of relief he received from the city, was given suspension of sentence for two years.

Angus R. Nissen was remanded until Tuesday for sentence on charges of stealing a bicycle and gold watch and chain. The chain and bicycle have been recovered and the youth was remanded until Tuesday to see if he could help police to recover the watch.

Eldon Kelly and William Geddes who were held by police for questioning in connection with the murder of Fred Oliver two months ago were in the toils of the law again Saturday and appeared on charges of vagrancy. They pleaded guilty and were ordered to get out of town in 12 hours or go to jail for six months. Charles Greenway pleaded guilty to a vagrancy charge and was given a similar choice.

• • •

John Riddale pleaded guilty to nine charges of fraud and was remanded until Tuesday. He pleaded not guilty to a charge of non-support. The fraud consisted of passing worthless cheques to the total of $65.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE WILL CLOSE MAY 1

Works Department Preparing To Shut Down Lt.-Governor's Residence

Preparations are under way by provincial public works department officials to close government house as the residence of the lieutenant governor as from May 1, it was learned on Saturday. Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works, stated that in view of the instruction of the legislature to the government, that votes for the maintenance of the lieutenant governor "be not spent" the necessary notice to this effect had been given.

In line with the closing of government house, notice was sent a few days ago to C. E. Roper, chauffeur to His Honor and to two temporary gardeners, that their services would terminate in a month.

HIS HONOR INFORMED

Mr. Fallow stated that His Honor had been informed of the legislature's decision, shortly after it had been made, while the members were in committee of supply.

While the house will be closed, the Minister stated that a caretaker would remain on the site to care for the building, grounds and attend to heating requirements.

Future of the house has not been decided, nor has any plan been made for use of the grounds.

HEATING COSTS

Heating costs, salary of caretaker and other incidentals are estimated to be about $5,400. Costs heretofore in respect of maintaining the Lieutenant-Governor, have been approximately $20,000.

No future plans were ready for announcement, it was stated at the Lieutenant-Governor's office on Saturday.

Gleaned From Today's News

Mrs. John Merenko, 13259 69 street, reported the theft of 15 hens from her chicken coop Friday night

H. R. Milner, K.C., Edmonton barrister, returned to the city Saturday morning after attending the Conservative party conference at Ottawa.

Leslie J. McDonald, 12020 101 street, reported that his house was broken into Friday night, but nothing taken. Rooms were ransacked and drawers upset.

The regular bi-monthly meeting of the Trades and Labor Council will be held at the Labor hall on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. A number of important matters are scheduled for discussion.

Body of Daniel H. Hanlon, veteran hotelman in Western Canada, who died Thursday morning in Edmonton, was shipped on the Canadian National train to Caledon East, Ontario, Friday, where funeral services and interment will take place. Hainstock & Son, Ltd., were in charge of arrangements.

There is at least one well-dressed thief in Edmonton today, according to police. Someone broke into the garage of David C. Adams, 13119 64 street, late Friday night and stole a suitcase and a leather bag from his car. The suitcase contained three suits, a quantity of other clothing, and the leather bag contained a camera, shoes and a razor.

Monday, being Easter Monday and a bank holiday, the courts will be closed. Supreme court chambers will be held on Tuesday morning, and the regular sittings of the supreme court, civil division, will open on Tuesday afternoon with Mr. Justice S. J. Shepherd presiding. Five divorce and four civil actions are listed for trial.

Reporting a series of successful organization meetings in the southern part of the province, Carl Berg, president of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council and business agent for the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Association, returned to Edmonton Saturday morning. Mr. Berg will preside at meetings of the Trades Council and the Edmonton locals of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union to be held early next week, and will leave for Calgary on Wednesday evening.

Firemen Place Official Time of Break-Up Friday

Floes Flow At Exactly 3:14 p.m.—Spring Here At Last

Ice went out of the Saskatchewan river at 3:14 p.m. on Friday and with the departure comes the comforting assurance that "spring has come." This is the same day it went out last year.

Tradition has laid down the general rule that you cannot be sure that spring has arrived until the ice has gone out, as, while it is still there, the weather has not gotten sufficiently warm to chase it away.

For several days it had been confidently expected that the ice would move and a watch was established by the city fire department.

On Friday morning there were evidence that the final break-up might come during the day.

ICE HUNG

Noon was reached and still the ice hung on

But, shortly after 3 p.m. the lookout of the fire department, delegated to watch the situation, reported the break-up had come.

Hundreds of cakes of ice floated down the river and thousands of residents, as they drove or walked across the high level or 105 street bridges, watched the sight.

Many motorists driving along the river bank at Victoria Park, watched the passage of the ice, while others stood on the river banks watching.

TIME STAMP

A time stamp officially recorded the break-up.

Early in the spring preparations were made for recording this event. A stake was driven into the ice approximately 20 feet from the pier just below the 105 street bridge and when the main body of ice broke, is swept down and swept away the stake, thus breaking an electrical circuit with the time stamp, which in turn punched the time.

And the time recorded was 3:14 p.m. on Friday, April 15.

Close observers had felt the ice would go out on Thursday night, but it held out until Friday afternoon.

EARLIEST DATE

The earliest date on record, on which the ice went out in April 4, 1930. That latest on record is May 6, 1909. In 1935 the ice moved out on April 24 and in 1936 it broke up on April 14 and last year, as on this, it broke up on April 15. This year beat last year by four hours, as in 1937 it passed a marker at Whitemud Creek at 7:55 p.m.

Members of the ways and means committee in charge of the Alberta Protestant Home for Children sweepstake on the Saskatchewan river break-up started a check-up of the thousands of counterfoils to determine the winner of the $250 first prize, and the $100 for the lucky contestant getting nearest to the 3:14 p.m. break up time.

It is not anticipated that the result will be known until Monday morning at the earliest Stanley Porter, in charge of the check, stated Saturday.

Boys' Pipe Band Completes Plans For Competition

Executive of the Edmonton Boys' Pipe Band have made final arrangements for the pipers and drummers competition and dance to be held in the I.O.O.F. hall, 103 st., on Saturday, April 23, at 8 p.m. The piping judges, H. Lunon, T. Craig and Alex Alnutt, will be on hand at 7:45 as well as the drumming judge, Bob Lunsden, and the officials of the Highlands Games Association.

John Milne, K. Nudd and H Gerrard were appointed to look after the door; Pipe Major John Robertson and Alex McLeod will be in charge of the competition numbers

Dancing is scheduled for 10 p.m. and tickets may be had from the members of the band or any member of the executive

The Inquiring Reporter

Delegation of Edmonton Unemployed Women at a recent meeting of the Edmonton Public School Board asked that the fees for the departmental examinations be dispensed with in relief cases, where the student was not able to meet the requirements of the Department of Education in this respect.

The Inquiring Reporter found:

GEORGE GLEAVE, school board trustee: I believe that delegation was rather poorly informed, for it has never been the practice to refuse any student the right to take his examinations even if he cannot pay the required fee. I have never heard of anyone being refused, and I think the best thing that can be done, is what has been done, that is to refer it back to the management committee for further discussion.

• • •

MRS. CONRAD JORDAN, housewife: It has often been a tight pinch to scrape together the money for my children's fees, but three of them have graduated with their senior matriculation and each one of them earned their own money to a great extent. They delivered groceries after four and on Saturdays, and two of the boys had paper routes which helped out considerably. It would certainly have made it easier for us if the fees had been a little lower, but it didn't hurt the kiddies any to get out and make their own way

JIM STONE, unemployed married man: It seems to me that the fees are nothing but a hold-up. I can't see where it takes all of one dollar to mark an examination paper. I know, of course, that the expenses are heavy but we shouldn't have to let our children quit school just because we can't afford to pay the necessary fees.

GRACE STUART, stenographer: I think that the fees should be dropped altogether. For everyone it is rather a strain but most of all for persons who are having a hard time. It has always seemed to me a shame that children are refused their examinations results, when their fees have not been paid. I am not sure that this is the case, but I understand that is one of the points brought up at the Board meeting on Tuesday

EASTER FEAST CELEBRATED IN REAL FASHION

Showers Probable For the Week-End, But Joyous Holiday Planned

Milady had better play safe with an umbrella over her gay Easter bonnet, weather "probs" for the week-end being "mild with probable showers." Which proves that Jupe Pluvius cares for no man—or woman, either.

There's an outside chance, though, that Old Sol will put his foot down and give the Easter parade a chance this year.

SPECIAL MUSIC

But good or bad weather, Edmonton will greet Easter in the time-honored manner. Churches will observe the festival of the Resurrection and the conclusion of the Lenten season with triumphant music.

Easter bunnies will be abroad early Sunday, delivering sweetmeats packaged in baskets and tied with ribbons, and in many homes children will have the time of their lives searching out eggs that have been cached behind the radio or in mother's work-basket.

Dress and suit shops report a brisk business in men's and women's outfits, and weather permitting the Easter parade this year will be a colorful spectacle.

LONG HOLIDAY

A large number of citizens will enjoy the long week-end holiday, many places of business observing both the Good Friday and Easter Monday holidays, with only a few hours' work sandwiched in Saturday morning. Banks, courts, and government offices are among those which will remain closed Monday.

The Easter festival comes comparatively late this year. The latest date on which it can be observed is April 25, the earliest date being March 22. Last year Easter fell on March 28. Next year it will be observed April 9.

TWO AIRWAYS FIRMS READY FOR BREAK-UP

Spring break-up is definitely in sight and the winter's flying operations to the north will be ended by the beginning of the week, it was stated by airmen here Saturday.

Although United Air Transport expect to continue their mail, passenger and express services to the Peace River country, northern British Columbia and the Yukon and their Fort St. John to Vancouver service without any breaks, the two companies flying into the northern mining fields, Canadian Airways and Mackenzie Air Service are preparing for a "lay-up" period of several weeks, when pilots will take holidays and planes will be repaired and reconditioned for the summer season expected to open late in May.

Harry Hayter will "melt in" at Yellowknife, for Mackenzie Air Service, continuing on skis as long as the ice holds on the northern lakes, and then changing to floats. Harry Winny will "melt in" for Canadian Airways at Yellowknife, and Jack Hames at Chipewyan

Meanwhile flights are being continued to and from the north, planes going northbound changing from wheels to skis at Lac la Biche, and planes southbound exchanging skis for wheels at the same place before continuing into Edmonton.

AURORA PUTS ON FINE SHOW FRIDAY NIGHT

Providing a beautiful and unusua sight for those who happened to b out and around late Friday evening northern lights put on a brillian display of colors. The lights resembled the reflection from a gigantic forest fire on the whole horizo almost blood-red lights entirely circling the moon, while the horizo showed deep shades of blue and indigo. The lights are said to be th equal of any northern lights displa ever seen here

Bringing out beads of perspiratio on many a forehead, Edmonton' temperature provided ideal holida weather for holidaying citizens o Friday, the highest reading for th day being 66 above, registered at p.m. During the night, howeve the mercury suffered a relapse an slumped down to 31 above, registered at 5 a.m.

At 9 a.m. Saturday, with the thermometer at 46 above, the forecas was "fair and mild."

Near north temperatures at 8:3 a.m. Saturday were well up th scale, the warmest spot being Pelican, with 50 above, while Grouar was lowest with 32 above.

Aklavik came close to the frig readings early Saturday with zer while Fort Simpson was warmest i the far north with 34 above.

Here on a round the world cruise F. S. Francis, retired business ma of Sussex, England, arrived in Edmonton Saturday morning. He is a guest at the Macdonald, being accompanied by a personal attendant W. D. F. Edney.

According To Culbertson

By ELY CULBERTSON

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: The enclosed hand, which was played in a rubber match, the other night, just goes to show what a hoax play on the part of the defenders may do to a guy who apparently has a laydown for a grand slam. I sat South. The following was the deal:

"North, dealer.

"The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	Pass	2 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	4 no trump	Pass
5 no trump	Pass	6 spades	Pass
7 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

"West opened the heart six. Dummy's ace won and East played the deuce. The hand looked like a single, I led one of dummy's small break, so to explore the diamond situation before leading trump, I led the ace from the dummy. East, without a moment's hesitation, dropped the queen. Seeing no reason for this, unless the queen were a sinle, I led one of dummy's small clubs, winning with the ace. I then cashed the club king. East played the deuce and then the four. Then I made the error that was my downfall. I figured that East had more clubs, for if West had held the Q-J-10-9 it would have been his best opening lead to have led the queen. Anyhow, I led the club eight and ruffed with the trump six. East overruffed and I was set.

"Sure, I know I should have ruffed a heart at trick four, and the diamonds could have been set up. The opponents hoodooed me. What do you think? Yours truly,

"L. A. F., Salisbury, N.C."

I am almost sorry that my correspondent asked "what do you think?" Because I hate to tell him! It is all very well for him to moan that he was hoaxed, or hoodooed, by the defenders. In actual fact, it can only be said that he hoaxed himself. When East threw the queen of diamonds on the ace there was utterly no reason for declarer's fright. Why not then lead a low diamond and put East's honesty to the test? Suppose that East did fail to follow suit. How could that harm declarer? If he ruffed declarer easily could overruff and base his subsequent play on knowledge of the diamond distribution rather than on fear. Obviously the moment both defenders followed to the second diamond trick declarer's "dilemma" would be resolved. The diamond break then could be no worse than 4-2 and one more ruff would establish the entire suit. Thus after ruffing the deuce of diamonds declarer would merely lay down the spade ace, then overtake the jack. Another low diamond lead and ruff with the king would "set the dummy." The lead of South's last spade to dummy and subsequent drawing of opponents' trumps would be child's play.

Without meaning to "rub things in" I am afraid that the defenders had very little to do with the defeat of this contract.

WEASELS DO NOT TURN WHITE IN WINTER
4-16

Because weasels are a brownish color in summer and white in winter, it is generally believed by hunters that when winter comes the fur changes color. The truth is that the fur itself does not change color, but that the brownish fur is shed and a new coat of fur, all white, is grown. Thus, it is a result of molting, rather than changing color of the fur. The weasel is a good example of "protective coloration"; that is being colored for its protection at all seasons. It is difficult to see a brown weasel in the brown grass of summer, or to see a white one in the white snow in winter.

Great Britain Still Makes Her Royal Folk Earn Their Keep

REGAL ENVOYS SENT OUT TO WIN ARABIANS

Star Salesman Prince Of Wales Missed—King To Visit France

By MILTON BRONNER
Bulletin Foreign Staff Correspondent

LONDON, April 16.—Great Britain still makes her royal folk earn their keep—even though she lost her star salesman when the last Prince of Wales passed out of his boyishly glamorous years into stolid middle age and a brief kingship.

As evidence that the British continue to recognize the magic of royal names in international affairs, it is not merely as a distinguished tourist but as an official ambassador of good will that King George soon will visit France to cement relations with that western continental power.

And, of perhaps equal or greater importance to England's fate in present hectic world affairs, was the recent visit of the soldierly-appearing Earl of Athlone, and his wife, Princess Alice, to King Ibn Saud, ruler of the greater part of Arabia. There was diplomacy back of their trip. There was political strategy behind it. There was a checkmate for various moves of Benito Mussolini in that quarter.

ORIENTAL MONARCHS

Oriental monarchs are ticklish people. When important events are afoot, it does not pay to dispatch ordinary, mine-run diplomats. For royalty, royalties. Hence the choice that was made.

The Earl of Athlone is a great grandson of King George III of England. He is also a brother of Queen Mary. His wife, Princess Alice, is a granddaughter of the late Queen Victoria. So they are doubly related to the royal house. Nothing less would do.

British statesmen are worried about the Arabs and about Moslem reactions. There is the strife in Palestine between Jews and Arabs with England trying to be the disinterested third party as holder of the mandate. There is the danger of repercussions among the 70,000,000 Moslems in India. There is the effect upon the Moslems of Irak and Egypt, which England used to boss and which she has now set up as independent states.

But above all, there is Mussolini. Ever since the Italian dictator was angered by the sanctions the League of Nations imposed upon Italy when she made her war upon helpless Ethiopia, he has held England mainly to blame. He has challenged England's supremacy in the Mediterranean.

He has made an open appeal to the Moslems, proclaiming himself their protector. He has given them special privileges in Ethiopia. He has filled the air with broadcasts in Arabic in which England got much the worst of it. He has made a treaty with the King of Yemen, an Arabic state which has ports right at the tip of the Red Sea where Italian submarines could threaten English ships if Italy and Britain were at war.

UP TO ENGLAND

All these things being true, it was up to England to make a counter move. That is where the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice came in. They had a grand Arabian Nights sort of experience. For the first time in his life, King Ibn Saud sat at meat with a woman—the Princess Alice. The meat consisted of ten whole sheep roasted over a slow fire. Fortunately the English royalties come from a country where mutton is a staple and prized diet.

Also, through an interpreter, they listened to Ibn's recital of his life—from the time when, as a soldier adventurer, he sought to regain his lost heritage as ruler of the Wahabis, until at long last he was leader of most of Arabia—the first man to achieve this since Mohammed himself. He liked his listeners.

NOT FIRST TIME

It's not the first time the Athlones have won people by their charm and their affability. The Earl, who served in the South African and the World Wars, was sent out to the Union of South Africa in 1923 as Governor General.

The term is usually for four years. Now the majority of the white people in South Africa are Boers and they have no exalted opinion of royalty as such.

But the Athlones made such a hit with British and Boers alike that a demand went up for a continuance of their service. Hence the Earl was named for a second term as Governor General, only returning to England in 1931.

With The Railroaders

The newly elected executive of the Canadian National Recreation Association has instituted an intensive membership drive and all employees of the Canadian National are urged to contact their departmental representatives with a view to determining the many benefits to be derived from membership in the association.

The membership committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. B. R. Cozens, has set an objective of one thousand members in this terminal and indications at present point to the attainment of that objective and possibly more by the closing date of the drive which has been set as July 15th.

Associate memberships are available to persons not employed by the Canadian National Railways who may wish to avail themselves of the many social and athletic activities sponsored by the associaytion. Prospective associate members may obtain any information required by telephoning Mr. Cozens at 26647.

An added feature inaugurated this year in connection ith the membership drive is the attractive cash prizes to be awarded to two of the fortunate holders of membership cards.

The Association executive has planned an extensive program for the ensuing year including lawn bowling, lawn tennis, table tennis, dancing, bingo parties and card parties for the winter months. In view of the summer activities commencing soon it is imperative that prospective members do not delay in purchasing membership cards.

DOGS

by P. Hamilton Goodsell

THE SEALYHAM TERRIER

Of comparatively recent origin, the Sealyham has firmly ensconced itself in popular favor. This is not surprising for the Sealie, as he is affectionately dubbed by devotees of the breed, is an engaging little fellow, smart in appearance; has great endurance, and gameness that knows no limit. He is a cheerful, affectionate companion, ready and eager for anything. Like the people of his native Wales he is ready for a scrap when occasion demands and as is the boast of the celebrated Welsh Guards, he always keeps his tail up no matter what fortune may bring.

SHORT HISTORY

For practical purposes the history of the breed goes back no further than 1910 when the Kennel club in London inaugurated classes for these dogs at its annual show. The British Isles have long been rich in dogs of the terrier type, and probably all are more or less closely related. Several varieties became established as distinct breeds only in the last century as, for instance, the Cairn, the West Highland White of Scotland, the Border terrier, the Kerry Blue of Ireland, etc. Twenty-five or thirty years ago these breeds were practically unknown except within limited areas in the British Isles.

The Sealyham owes its origin to the late Captain John Edwardes, from whose estate in Pembrokeshire the breed derives its name. This gentleman, desiring a terrier for sporting use that should be dead game and yet would be small enough to go to earth after such vermin as badgers, weasels, etc., produced this breed of terrier. When so many claiming to know the breeds from which the captain developed the Sealyham differ greatly among themselves as to just what stock he used, it is foolish to endeavor to record actual facts concerning these dogs. One thing seems certain, however. Since Edwardes' death in the 1870's outside blood has not been introduced into the breed by local breeders who, prizing highly the breed's abilities in the sporting line, did not perhaps always breed along systematic lines. If it be true, as some writers hold, that the foundation stock was the Corgi, since the latter breed is red or red and white, it would seem that terrier blood of some sort must have been infused. This very likely may have been the common terrier of that section much like the old-fashioned Fox terrier, and following this strain back we are led to the short-legged terriers of the north. The first Sealies were considerably higher in the leg than is the breed at present.

ENTHUSIASTS SCOFFED

The breed soared to heights of great popularity, and good specimens brought tremendous prices running well up into thousands of dollars. Members of the breed have rolled up an enviable record of glorious wins in their group and have gone best of all breeds at some of the largest and best known shows. Ten or eleven years ago a wonderful specimen imported by Frederic C. Brown, of New York, Champion Pinegrade Perfection, made sensational wins; and at the show held by the American Kennel club in connection with the Sesqui-Centennial in Philadelphia, it won the cup for best in show offered by the Kennel club in London. This triumph was repeated at the great Westminster Kennel club show in New York the following February

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly

For Battlers Tough Spots Start Here

EVERY now and then some young battler with fistic crowns dancing before his eyes comes into the office and politely asks if I happen to know this or that promoter here and there in the United States and if I do would I mind giving a letter of introduction to him. The other day a letter came from a young fellow out in the country who was convinced that he has a ring future. He had saved up a few hundred iron men and couldn't quite decide whether he should make his bid for fame in New York or London, England.

In view of the number of fighting youngsters who seem to be worried by the same problem, a few of the unvarnished truths about the fight game may prove of interest. For a Canadian leather-pusher who is just starting in the game, England is a better bet than the U.S.—although it is far from being a land where fights can hbe ad for the asking.

If you invade the old land, there will be times when a shilling will look as big to you as the barn on the old home farm. You may even win a lot of fights in England—but they don't mean a thing you'll discover when you try to cash in on them in American fistiana. Maybe it's because these English fights "ain't got that swing"—to use a current musical phrase

The U.S. Racket Is Tougher Still

RIGHT off the bat I can't name a single Canadian fighter who has ever invaded the U.S. rings without an established reputation and got anything more than a slap-happy mentality for his efforts. What is more such an invader will be right lucky if he eats two meals a day. Most managers advise their fighters not to eat oftener. The benefits are financial—not physical.

The truth of the matter is that fighting in the U.S. has gotten into the wrong kind of hands—with of course the odd exceptional case here and there. The commissions know that just as well as the leather-pushers that are being robbed and turned into slap-happy has-beens by chiselling promoters, bookers and managers. However these commissioners don't seem to be big enough, or free enough from political racketeering to run these rats out of the game.

As a result, it is almost fistic suicide for any young fighter to make a safari into the U.S. rings until he has fought himself to at least a [illegible] Boxing Federation's auspices. These [illegible] U.S. and they give the fighter a [illegible] forget the game. He'll get nothing [illegible]

Try Co-operating a Little

THE chief reason that fighting is not booming better in the west is that every mitt slinger has an exaggerated idea of the dough a promoter should guarantee him for a fight. Right now I can name half a dozen good towns in Alberta where fights would be staged regularly if fighters would work on a percentage basis with the promoters like [illegible]

If any fighter has the idea that he can go down to a U.S. gym and get a trainer to teach him the fine points of the game and spend the time necessary to develop him is just screwy. Seventy per cent of the guys handling fighters south of the line don't even know the rudiments of boxing themselves.

That may sound screwy too, but it's a fact. Dick Demaray, the Bismarck Bomber, never saw a boxer being taught the basic fundamentals until [illegible] a couple of beginners at his gym here. Dick was a mighty interested spectator. Of course there are experts in the U.S. that are really tops—they can't be beat anywhere but these men are not interested in unknown newcomers. They'll only work with a fighter they own and whom they are convinced has championship possibilities.

Successor

DR. W. G. HARDY

First vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey association who also featured in the uprise of amateur hockey these last two years in Canada. Dr. Hardy is expected to succeed Cecil Duncan as president of the C.A.H.A. and may get his post today at the association's annual general meeting.

Trail Takes Favored Spot Clash Tonight

CALGARY, April 16—Almost everyone but rabid Cornwall supporters installed Trail Smoke Eaters as odds-on favorites to make it two straight when the teams tangle tonight in the second game of the Allan Cup finals.

The "Calgary hockey special" passed through Nelson last night, picking up 25 passengers to swell the 500 who left Trail to attend the Allan Cup finals at Calgary tonight and Monday.

Trail Maple Leaf Band and a gymnasium troupe were on board and will perform on Calgary ice between periods of the games.

FLYERS ON SPOT

Several arguments were submitted—the altitude change would tire the eastern champions quickly, the long overnight train ride from Saskatoon would stiffen their muscles and the larger ice surface at Calgary would make the British Columbia artists' speed and pretty passing more effective than in Saskatoon.

But observers who saw Flyers in earlier playdown games replied the St. Lawrence river sextet turned in their worst performance yet in the first game of the best-of-five series as they lost a two-goal lead in little more than six minutes of the third period and then faded before Smoke Eaters' inspired overtime rush for a 6-4 win.

The smelter town boys will be at full strength tonight with Jimmy Morris, fighting defenceman, back after missing the first game with a sprained ankle. Dick Kowcinak, left winger, was reported fully recovered from a heavy bodycheck by big Mike McMahon.

CECIL DUNCAN

Retiring president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, whose brilliant executive work has brought the assets of the C.A.H.A. back to its level of former years after four poor years had dried up huge surplus funds. Mr Duncan will quit his post today as the association elects new officials

Rupert Golf Links Popular Holiday Centre

The Prince Rupert golf course was one of the most active sportive spots on the Friday holiday.

A record day was established at the Rupert links with a large crowd enjoying their games over the early conditioned course. But the biggest feature Friday was the increased number of people playing who are already season ticket holders boosting the Prince Rupert club membership to a possible new high figure.

Prospects of the best season since 1931 appear bright, according to Maurice Hunter, the manager, under whom the Prince Rupert club has made impressive progress since he took over control in 1936 for the land department of the Hudson's Bay company

Permanent greens are reported in great shape with fairways thick as a result of beneficial rains late last fall and a fairly heavy fall of snow. These fairways, however, will be improved with the installation of a watering system for the entire 18 holes. This system will be installed during the middle of May, therefore the fairways will lose none of their present lustre when the hot summer suns beat down on them.

Further enjoyment greeted golfers as dining room services were obtainable during the holiday. Tempting home-cooked meals rounded out a pleasant afternoon at the Rupert club.

Westerns Play Winnipeg Quintet First Game Tonight

WINNIPEG, April 16—Winnipeg St. Andrews and Vancouver Westerns clash here tonight in the first game of the two-of-three western Canada men's basketball final with the British Columbians favored but the Manitoba champions ready for their most determined bid since the famous Winnipeg Toilers held the national title in 1933.

Second game will be played Monday with the third, if necessary, on Tuesday.

Memorial Cup Referees Changed

OTTAWA, April 16.—Referees for the Memorial Cup hockey finals have been changed, Cecil Duncan, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced last night.

The two officials for the rest of the series are Jack Duggan of Ottawa and George Bonemere of Montreal. They replace Happy Shouldice of Ottawa and Russ McBride of Winnipeg

Loftus Loses On Unpopular Decision

SASKATOON, April 16.—Billy Evans, of Regina, last night won the western Canada welterweight championship with a decision over Jonny Loftus of Edmonton. Evans, at 147, had a five-pound edge over Loftus. The decision 2-1 in favor of Evans, was unpopular with the crowd

Reinstatement Rule Has Change For 3-Year Men

OTTAWA, April 16.—Hockey players who have played three years in professional leagues will not be eligible for reinstatement as amateurs until they are out of the monied ranks for three consecutive years under a resolution passed by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association at its annual meeting here Friday.

Last year the C.A.H.A. decided to reinstate players out of the pro game three years and others out a shorter time when special circumstances existed.

President Cecil Duncan explained to the convention Friday that compassionate consideration given some cases conflicted with the rules of the Ligue International de Hockey sur Glace, the world governing organization. The amendment was put through to bring the C.A.H.A. into line with other national associations.

$35,000 to Open Lean Year Account

Western Canada Is Granted Protection Against Pro Raiding; Residence Rule Also Undergoes Change

OTTAWA, April 16.—Solvency of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association was assured for some years when the annual convention voted to create a trust fund of $35,000 to be used only for Olympic competition and in lean years.

In a busy day delegates moved to create the trust fund, granted Western Canada protection against raids by professional teams, decided to alternate Allan and Memorial Cup games between east and west and dealt with a dozen other problems.

They decided to resume grants to branches, halted in depression years, brought several classes of players under an exception to the residence date, decided against barring commercial teams from Allan and Memorial cup games and granted the executive power to commemorate suitably the association's silver jubilee next year.

The trust fund was made possible by President Cecil Duncan's able direction of the C.A.H.A's affairs for the two years. The Ottawan will retire when new officers are elected today. His probable successor is Dr. W. G. Hardy, of Edmonton.

STAGES COMEBACK

When Duncan took office the association had only $4,000 in assets after four disastrous years in which deficits totalled $48,934. This cut heavily into the huge reserves the association had built up in prev-

Appeals to Own

Mossfel Jo

THE come made its first appea the masked wrestle royal, the Memorial Hall last night, when Don Ferguson and Mickey Martin managed to survive the general melee. Ferguson then handed Mickey an awful walloping for a two-fall victory and top honors for the evening.

But is was a mighty poor night for that master villan, Oscar Mossfeldt. Ossie was ousted early in the wrestle royal even though he tore his blindfold off, then he barely managed to hold Larry Jacobsen to a draw in the opening match following the general melee. But Mossfeldt wasn't through. He wended his way over to Mickey Martin's corner as that wee grappler prepared to meet Don Ferguson in the final bout of the evening.

Instilled with Oscar's ideas of "fair play", Mickey tore into Ferguson with wicked rights and lefts. Fergie replied with a jolting body slam that almost caved Martin in. Mickey was in dire straits but "Manager" Oscar proved equal to the occasion. He reached through the ropes and pulled Martin to safety.

OSCAR ON RUN

Referee Louis Lavoie was wild, and Ferguson was plumb mad. Fergie climbed through the ropes after Oscar. Oscar ran up into the crowd, but [illegible] Fergie followed. Through the ropes in hot pursuit went Lavoie and Martin. Lavoie separated Ferguson and Mossfeldt, then tangled with the terrible Oscar himself before the bout could continue. Four times during the evening Oscar caught hold of Martin and pulled him through the ropes, just when Don seemed sure to win a fall.

But woe and betide the stars weren't shining on Ossie for Ferguson took the first fall of the bout with a body press. Then Mossfeldt trotted into the dressing room and came out with an onion which he slipped to Martin. Ferguson promptly took the onion away from Mickey and massaged that worthy's eyes with the vegetable. He then finished his rout of Mossfeldt's protege with a series of flying drop kicks and a body press.

Louis Lavoie was so enraged at Mossfeldt's actions that he challenged him to a rough and tumble match with nothing barred for next Friday night. It's rumored Oscar broke Mike Cutchre's fountain pen in his hurry to get the scrappy referee to sign on the dotted line.

ELIMINATED.

First couple to be eliminated in the battle royal was Jacobsen and Mossfeldt, who wrestled to a draw, while the second pair out was Darby Melnick and Maurice DeBlieck, with Darby getting the only fall of the match.

The big bad wolf, Cliff Parker, mauled, pounded and slammed "Tiger" Goldstick and Mike Percheson in the opening bout of the night, a baby wrestle royal. But Clifford couldn't quite gain a fall during the hectic fifteen minutes. Twice Goldie was sent flying through the ropes, but each time that rigorous week of hard training he put in came to his rescue and he managed to stagger back and lend assistance to Percheson.

Charlotte Girl Wins Feature Race With Longden Up

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 16.—Charlotte Girl carried the silks of Elwaad Sachenmaier to her fifth victory in as many starts when she outclassed five other two-year-olds in the 26th running of the Aberdeen Stakes which featured the opening of Havre De Grace's 14-day meeting.

With Johnny Longden of Taber, Alta., in the saddle, the daughter of Cohort finished five lengths in advance of W. H. Berri's star runner. F. J. Buchanan's My Porter lost runner-up honors by a head. Charlotte Girl returned $2.90 for a $2 win mutuel after stepping the 4½ furlongs in 53 3-5 seconds, only three-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

Ace Hurlers Get Call For Ball Openers

NEW YORK, April 16.—They're leading with their aces from most of the big league decks for opening day pitching assignments next week, but Burleigh Grimes is going to do something different.

He's calling on the "money" card, old Waite Hoyt, to go for Brooklyn.

PASSES UP ACES

Boiling Boily looked over his hand, passed up Van Mungo and Freddy Fitzsimmons and picked old Waite to take the first trick from the Phillies Tuesday. It will be the start of Waite's 21st year in the big leagues, his 670th game.

Otherwise, the big league pilots are putting their best pitching foot forward for the play ball signal Monday and Tuesday. Three of the nominees, Dizzy Dean for the Cardinals; Cy Blanton for the Pirates, and Wes Ferrell for the Senators, won the same honor a year ago, although Ferrell then sported Boston Red Sox colors.

Two others, Lefty Gomez, of the Yankees, and Hal Schumacher, of the Giants, may also go to the post for the second straight time, although each still has to win the call from a team-mate. Manager Joe McCarthy may pick Red Ruffing rof the world champions' debut against the Red Sox in Boston Monday, and let Lefty wait until the Yanks open their home park here Friday.

MELTON IS LIKELY

Bill Terry thought about a week ago that Schumie would get the call for his National league pennant winners, but right now he figures Cliff Melton is in better condition to go against the Boston Bees.

Mickey Cochrane had about settled on Tommy Bridges, but Tommy has just recovered from a sore arm. George Gill may get the call against the White Sox at Chicago Tuesday. Charlie Grimm hasn't quite decided yet on Tex Carleton, or his young ace of last year, Clay Bryant, and Connie Mack will either call on Harry Kelley or Bill Kalfass, rookie up from Trenton of the New York-Penn circuit. Kalfass is the only freshman figuring in the opening day nominations.

Lacrosse League Opens On May 3

With present plans calling for the forming of four junior clubs and five or six juvenile aggregations, the Edmonton and District Lacrosse League came into being at a meeting held Thursday night at the Y.M.C.A. The league is scheduled to swing into operation May 3, with the first half continuing to June 15. The second half of the schedule will get under way August 15.

Dr. A. W. Macbeth was elected president of the association. George MacKintosh and Jack Kelly were named first and second vice presidents respectively. George W. Harris will be secretary treasurer. An executive will be composed of a member from each club in the league.

ious years. But during two years of Duncan's administration the C.A.H.A. returned to its former affluence.

Its assets at March 1, totalled $29,772 and to this will be added $17,000 taken in preliminary playoff games and receipts from the Allan and Memorial Cup finals not yet received. When all the money is in the association is expected to have $60,000.

From this will be taken $35,000 to form the trust fund. If the association finds it necessary to borrow from the fund, to be administered by an investment trust company it will have to be done by a three-quarters vote of an annual meeting. Expenses of C.A.H.A. officials will be cut until the loan is repaid.

The west's plea for protection against raids by professional teams found response in a resolution which set a deadline of September 1 this year and May 15 in future years for transfers between east and west. The previous transfer deadline of October 15 was in force throughout Canada. The west is considered to be the Thunder Bay branch and all branches west of it.

HALT PRO RAIDS

The object of the change is to prevent professional teams from trying out players in fall "hockey schools" and then placing them with amateur teams in the east until they ripen.

The convention also decided to wipe out the residence deadline or classes of players already excluded from provisions of the transfer rule which affects players moving from branch to branch.

The expected players include students, those whose parents move, militiamen, members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, players not registered with the C.A.H.A. the year previous, the employees with six months continuous servce before the date of transfer. In future they may transfer at any time but must not play for more than one team in any season.

A proposal that netural referees be appointed for all play-downs was referred back to the resolutions committee when it was pointed out the move would be expensive in Western Canada interprovincial play-downs where referees would have to be brought from a third province.

It was decided the executive should investigate with a view to starting a system of insuring players taking part in the senior and junior playdowns. It also was decided to continue the $500 grant to clubs in the national finals and to give each branch $300 this year for promotion of minor hockey

Oxford Attracts Young Americans

SWARTHMORE, Pa., April 16—Rhodes scholarships at Oxford are becoming more attractive than ever to young American college men, said Dr. Frank Aydelotte, United States secretary to the Rhodes Trustees as nearly 600 young candidates went before state selection committees.

Of the 590 applicants, a larger total than last year, 32 will be chosen to take two or three-year courses at Oxford with annual stipends of £400 ($2,000) each.

Expansion of the English university's educational facilities, largely owing to the gifts of Lord Nuffield, motor magnate, was given by Dr Aydelotte as the reason for the increased competition

Of an additional £500,000 ($2,500,000) the university is seeking to raise to supplement the Nuffield gifts, Dr. Aydelotte reported, some £18,000 ($90,000) has been contributed by Oxonians in the United States. Dr. Aydelotte is president of Swarthmore College.

Arsenal Defeat May Prove Costly

LONDON, April 16.—A bad lapse by Arsenal at Highbu may cost the colorful Londoners the English footb league championship. The Gunners had their colors lower 2-0 by Brentford and as a result are now only one point ahe of Wolverhampton Wanderers and Preston North End in t race for the title.

LARGE CROWDS

Good Friday football in England and Wales attracted large crowds and many topsy-turvy results were recorded. In the second division eight games were carded but only three home teams came through successfully.

A great 10-1 victory over Leicester City, highest score of the first-division campaign to date, put Wolverhampton in a good position with 44 points. Preston won at Chelsea 2-0 to keep on level terms with the Wolves who have the advantage of a game in reserve.

At the other end of the table Huddersfield Town, Portsmouth and Manchester City are joint holders of last place with 31 points each. Grimsby Town defeated Portsmouth 1-0, Manchester City went under 2-1 to Bolton Wanderers while Huddersfield was idle.

SHEFFIELD CLIMBS

No game was scheduled for Aston Villa in the second division and its place at the top of the league was taken by Sheffield United, winner 2-1 over Tottenham Hotspurs on the latter's ground. Manchester United, another contender for promotion, slipped a cog at Burnley, losing the only goal of the game.

Watford downed Notts County to go into a tie with Queen's P Rangers for leadership of the th division's southern section. Rangers drew 1-1 with Clapton ient. In the northern circuit H City and Tranmere Rovers went in front. The City got a 4-2 decis at Port Vale and its rival triumph 3-1 at Southport

New Easter Cards Forsake Traditional Pastel Tints

Children's Easter cards are gay with bunnies, colorful chicks and ingratiating ducklings.

Easter greeting cards that children will love to send to one another are bright and gay and will be fun to keep, play with and [illegible] for [illegible] and [illegible]. Sweet little bunnies, colorful chicks and ingratiating ducklings cavort around on vivid backgrounds. The traditional pastels, long established as conventional Easter hues—pale yellow and lavender, light green, and pink, silver and so on—yield their supremacy this year to a new [illegible] tones and for a striking [illegible] various finishes, and copper to vie with silver. There are handsome Easter greetings in more grown-up mood [illegible]. The lily in a variety of renderings lends itself particularly well to the designs in the point of contemporary art. Other cards of floral motif gain originality by unexpected blooms, such as poppies, lilacs, wisteria, pansies or orchids in preference to the springtime flowers usually found on Easter cards. If you want something especially new, try one with a bluebird (for happiness) in top hat and [illegible].

Pete, The Perambulating Pup

A tumble from a third-story window, resulting in a broken back and paralysis of his hind quarters, slowed up Pete, a Welsh terrier belonging to Mrs. Tony Curro of San Francisco, but Pete isn't licked by a long shot. Using the two-wheeled contraption shown here, which cradles his paralyzed parts, Pete gets around ably with little Martha Currow, 4, and now and then even launches a good old-fashioned cat chase.

J. D. Alderman Secretary

"Ha-a-ppy Birthday to You!" was the cat-chy theme song of a gay party when the Elks of Seneca Falls, N.Y., pussyfooted around, quiet as a mouse, so as not to disturb the bewhiskered guest of honor, Mr. Tommy Clark, pet of Dr. W. L. Clark. The B.P.O.E. members appointed Tommy as honorary life member of their lodge to commemorate his 23rd birthday, which, they say, makes him the Methuselah mouser of the country. The Puss Patriarch is seen at left, as, after putting on the dog with catnip cocktails at his birthday party, he wonders if purrhaps, the certificate of life membership above has any claws making it good for nine lives.

They Won't Be So Backward Later On

These four lion cubs, pride of the Philadelphia Zoo, were born to Fawa and Sultan, the zoo's adult pair of lions, five weeks ago. They cringed into a corner of their cage when the cameraman invaded their home—but wait till they grow up. He wouldn't dare do that a year from now!

Tip-Toe Through the Tulips

Little Marie Greenfield presents a delightful picture, which will no doubt be appreciated by those parts of Canada which have been undergoing April blizzards, as she picks tulips in Washington, D.C., where Dutch colonists raise the graceful flower in large quantities. Owing to their premature arrival this year an attempt will be made to replace the traditional Easter lily with tulips. Thousands of the blooms are being shipped from the Washington gardens daily to all parts of the continent.

Hitting The Trail

Good Friday and Easter Sunday ceremonials form the basis for most of the Tuxis and Trail Ranger activities planned for this week-end. Groups all over the city will echo memorial services to the Easter Spirit with the largest and perhaps, the most impressive of these taking place at the First Baptist church commencing at 8:30 a.m. Easter Sunday morning. A large gathering of youth organizations affiliated with and forming part of the Tuxis and Trail Ranger groups for boys and C.G.I.T. groups for girls is expected both to take part and be in attendance on this occasion.

First Baptist Tuxis and Trail Ranger groups have been busily engaged for the past few weeks in preparation of an Easter play, "Resurrection," which they intend to present to audiences on the nights of Good Friday and Easter Sunday. Its director is William [illegible] with Miss Gwen Sellers and Miss [illegible] assisting.

Other activity among First Baptist groups was the completion of final plans for an athletic training course for Trail Ranger boys to be held at the Y.M.C.A. twice each week commencing shortly after Easter. With athletic ambitions well in front these same boys are also drawing baseball bats from winter confinements and preparing line-ups for the first baseball team to be entered in the Trail Ranger league.

The King and Queen will again as last year, review the thousand representative Boy Scouts from all parts of England who will assemble in the quadrangle of Windsor Castle on Sunday, April 24, prior to the annual Boy Scout National Service in St. George's Chapel. The service is in commemoration of St. George as the Patron Saint of scouting.

Snakes Of Sizes

BRANTFORD, Ont., April 16—Valued at $3,500 and first part of a "zoo" for this city, a 30-foot boa constrictor, two 25-foot pythons and a collection of smaller snakes (10 to 12 feet) have arrived here.

Princesses To Have Fine Swimming Pool At the Royal Lodge

New Pool To Be Built To Aid Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose in Pursuit of Aquatic Honors

British United Press

LONDON, April 16—A specially-designed swimming pool is to be built at the Royal Lodge in Windsor Park to enable Princess Elizabeth, 12, and Princess Margaret Rose, 7, to get more outdoor exercise during the summer.

The pool, designed so that the princesses can improve their swimming in perfect safety, will be built while the Royal Family are in residence at Windsor Castle this month so that the King and Queen themselves will be able to supervise the work.

Both princesses are good swimmers. Princess Elizabeth has already swum a length in the Bath Club bath—just short of 75 feet. Her [illegible] rapid progress too.

According to plans which have been drafted the Royal Lodge pool will be about the same dimensions as that at the Bath Club but it will have a specially shallow end where Princess Margaret Rose can be given lessons. The bath will be equipped with diving-boards of various heights and will be lined with green-tinted tiles.

The King it is understood, has decided that the princesses are studying too hard. Their morning [illegible] subjects, including Spanish.

Both princesses are also being taught geography by a new and interesting method that they are finding fascinating. They have large maps [illegible] feet across, made of plastic material, so that mountains, valleys, and other features are shown realistically. On these maps the princesses can also make alterations, helping them to understand how the commerce and history of the world would be changed if its geography were different.

Whitehorn Trophy Is Won By Bernard Acton, Bill Mazuryk

Finals for possession of the Whitehorn Trophy, emblematic of two-member team debating supremacy at Alberta college, have finally been completed and Bernard Acton and Bill Mazuryk will have their names engraved on a silver shield to be added to the two already there. In 1936 the cup was won by Holly Freeman and Hugh Knox and last year by Winnifred Bridges and Gordon Straughan.

Topic for the final debate was: "Resolved that capitalism is not a failure." The winners took the affirmative and were opposed by Bryan Ford Sutton and Nick Baron. It was an excellent and close contest with the students greatly in doubt as to whom would be the winners. Both sides put up fine arguments and spent much time in rebuttal.

This is the second time Commercial has taken the trophy, for the 1936 winners were Commercial and the 1937 Grade XI students.

Judges were Mrs. Roy Anderson, Dr. W. M. Grant, minister of Metropolitan United church and Rev. E. W. Scragg, minister of Westminster United church. Dr. F. S. McCall, principal of Alberta college, presented the trophy.

While the judges were out deliberating, the audience was entertained by the mezzo-soprano voice of Miss Helen Sawchuk, accompanied by Marie Kraft, and a piano solo by Jim Thompson.

During 1937 Imperial Headquarters of the Boy Scout Association dealt with 150,531 letters.

Scout Doings

With the approach of spring and its opportunities for out-door activity the Scouting executive is hastily pushing on with its indoor training courses for patrol leaders and Cub instructors in preparation for a revitalized summer program.

The patrol leaders' course is scheduled for the 22nd and 23rd of April and will be directed and supervised by Harry Holloway, commissioner for training for Edmonton and district, and Tommy Jones, assistant district commissioner, Boy Scouts.

The course is intended to provide training for patrol leaders in methods of handling and organizing patrol work, teaching the younger boys the meaning and significance of the Scout laws, as well as imparting to the leaders themselves a store of Scouting knowledge contributed by the experienced men with whom they have been in contact.

As an added incentive for the boys to take a lively interest in the course a new badge has been issued by dominion headquarters to be presented to those leaders attending the course and passing the necessary tests and qualifications. This badge takes the form of a bronze arrow head which will be worn directly above the patrol leader's shoulder knot, and Scouting officials hope to send a good many of the boys home on the 23rd with this newly added prize in their possession.

The other course in Scout training, designed to instruct the older boys in carrying heavier responsibilities, and assuming the more important organization positions, trains them for the job of Cub instructor. This is now well under way, with Harry Holloway, commissioner of training; Charlie Bowsell and Harry White directing the first quarter of the course, was conducted last Monday night in the basement rooms of the McLeod building.

In attendance were ten present and prospective Cubbers, one of whom was Mrs. Backman, indicating that women also are interested and desirous to learn the art of Cub instruction. Others were: Louis Ray, Len Bevan, James Green, H. McGregor, John Dick, Bill Whitehouse, Bud Bradly, Stan Wood and Les Radford. Mr. Holloway discussed the fundamentals and aims of Cubbing which are to prepare the younger boys for good citizenship and good Scouting. Practical instruction in Cub games, the grand howl, jungle dances and knot tying were also included in the evening's program.

Royal Dolls For Royal Couple

When King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England visited the British Industries Fair at Olympia, they found likenesses of their two little daughters, Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, awaiting there for them in the form of dolls, as pictured above. In real life, Princess Elizabeth is almost 12, while Margaret Rose is 7.

They were the youngest entrants in the tournament. Eddie uses a three-pound ball, but slides up to the line on regulation alleys to hit regulation pins. A cripple when a baby, he regained the use of his legs following an operation, and took up bowling to exercise them.

Norwood Fathers Are Guests Of Sons At Banquet

Boys' clubs of Norwood United church were the hosts to a crowd of hungry fathers when the annual Norwood Father and Son banquet was conducted last week. Feature of the whole affair was "black magic" in the form of card tricks, vanishing acts and other feats of magic performed by "Confucius" who had both fathers and sons baffled all evening.

At the close of the entertainment the hosts and their guests congregated at the church gym where a series of games were played, led by James MacBurney.

Early On Fags

CHATHAM, England, April 16—Charged with stealing £5 ($25) worth of cigarettes, cigars and candies, a 14-year-old boy told police he smoked 75 cigarettes a day. "I smoked the cigars, too," he said.

"An important group of men such as you help to keep order in society."—Mayor Adhemar Raynault of Montreal, addressing Quebec Scout leaders.

GREY OWL NOT INDIAN BLOOD IS CLAIM NOW

Temigami Resident Declares Naturalist Was Englishman

NORTH BAY, Ont., April 16 — Claim that Grey Owl, famous Indian naturalist with the braided hair, colorful costume and moccasins, was a full-blooded Englishman, who came into northern Ontario in 1906 with a Cockney accent, was made today.

Grey Owl died Wednesday at Prince Albert, Sask., and if the story told by William H. Guppy of Temagami station, near here, is true, one of the world's best-known Indians was no Indian at all.

REAL NAME

Guppy said Grey Owl's name was Archie Belaney, a fact Grey Owl admitted when in 1915 he joined the Canadian forces at Digby, N.S But Grey Owl said later he was born near the Mexican border. His father was a Scot named McNeil, his mother an Apache Indian.

Guppy said: "Archie Belaney was a young Englishman when I first met him at Temiskaming in 1906. I should say he was about 23 or 24.

"COCKNEY" ACCENT

"He spoke with an ordinary English accent, a Cockney accent we used to say in those days. He didn't know a word of Indian."

Guppy took him in hand and made a guide of him.

"He really was a good guide and he delighted to learn all the tricks of the woodsman, like using an axe skilfully and all the arts of the guide," Guppy related. He was, in fact, like a boy playing Indian.

INDIAN FRIENDS

"He just loved cowboys and Indians, and spent his days trying to be one. Indians were his friends and he lived with them. Then he went out to war and I lost sight of him."

Guppy said he was amused years later when he read and saw photographs of Grey Owl. He was positive it was the Englishman, "still playing Indian."

SURVEY SCHOOL PUPILS "MOVE" BUILDINGS NOW

First and second year students of the faculty of engineering of the University, attending Survey school, have been encountering difficulties in keeping campus buildings in their proper positions, according to their calculations.

Students, working in pairs, are given projects, surveying from a given point to another and returning, and must finish with the same elevation as that with which they started. One pair starting out from the Arts building, surveyed several blocks away to measure the height of a water hydrant, and returned to find the Arts building suspended a foot off the ground. Doing the project again, they later found that their calculations were in error and the building was restored to its normal position.

The two feminine members of the school, Katherine Chambers, a civil engineering student, and Jean Wallbridge, an architecture student, encountered a similar difficulty when they finished a project to find the university power house 10 feet under the ground. Fortunately the error was speedily corrected.

Lloydminster May Pipe Gas Outside

LLOYDMINSTER, April 16. — Walter F. Thorn of Moose Jaw, flew into Lloydminster yesterday on an inspection of the local gas field. Several of the wells that are capped were opened up. Thorn, it is understood, represents eastern and American capital that is interested in the proposed proposition of piping natural gas from the local field to other Saskatchewan towns and cities.

FRANCE, ITALY ACCORD LOOMS AS PLANS LAID

PARIS, April 16.—Premier Edouard Daladier and his cabinet advisers laid plans Monday for a Franco-Italian agreement.

Sources close to the foreign office said conversations would be started next week to reach an accord along the lines of the Anglo-Italian pact to be signed tomorrow in Rome.

The proposed agreement would be designed to do double duty:

1—Settling Franco-Italian differences.

2—Bringing France a closer assurance of British help in event of trouble in Europe or North Africa.

Hogarth and Cruikshank, two English cartoonists, employed the "continuity" idea long before the American comic strip was founded.

Care and Management of POULTRY
By C. A. ROBINSON

One of the most prevalent diseases at this time is Coccidiosis, and although many so-called cures and remedies have been advertised the writer still thinks prevention is the best remedy to give first consideration to and again we stress the point of watchful sanitation.

Coccodiosis is a disease of the intestinal tract of the birds and is caused by a species of coccidia. The disease is found chiefly in young chickens and baby chicks, also in older birds, although the latter are more resistant. Various investigators state there are six species of coccodia in chickens alone, four of which are disease-producing and two considered harmless. The symptoms produced are similar to Pullorum Disease and in addition, the droppings are usually blood-stained. Birds under two months of age seldom survive a severe outbreak, dying in a few days, and if they recover are usually stunted. The disease is transmitted by means of feed, water and soil that have become contaminated with the droppings of infected birds.

Infection may be brought in with new birds, or eggs, or may be carried by running water, dust, shoes of attendants, grain sacks, birds, flies or other insects. Many remedies advertised (in the writer's opinion) have had perhaps some beneficial results, but on the whole, sanitation and prevention is, after all, the best method of control. However, the writer next Saturday will offer his own particular method which he has found to produce the best results in the treatment of this disease.

Leadership Urged

SASKATOON, April 16.—Women are gradually assuming their rightful place as men's equals and there has never been a time in world history when women's leadership was so needed Prof. E. Cartwright of the University of Saskatchewan told a women's group here.

The gila monster, in times of plenty, stores up fat in its tail; when food is scarce, this reserve supply is absorbed through the blood.

Easter Cruise

The music for the Paul Jones was more lively, lending that element of the old-fashioned "square dance," with everybody joining hands-all-round. It induced many of the older couples, not so sure of the latest steps, to try a turn of it. The floor was quickly crowded.

Gaily the orchestra leader blew a whistle and called the changes: "Single line, now, and MARCH! Hands on shoulders" . . . "Ladies right, gentlemen left" . . . Find your partners!"

Faster and faster the music was stepped up; more and more hilarious became the dancing. Joyce went through the changes, her cheeks flushed, smiling in bright abandon because she did not realize that anything so gay as a Paul Jones might bring its difficulties.

"Form a circle!" ordered the leader, and quickly they all joined hands and swung around the floor, humming the rhythm of the music. "Right and left!" Once more they wove their way in and out, the ladies to the right, the gentlemen to their left, with always those uncertain few who could not make up their minds as to which was right and which was left.

Then Joyce, stepping along merrily, hand over hand, looked down the line of approaching men and caught her breath. "Lord!" she thought, "look what's coming!" For there, directly in front of her, just one man removed now, was pudgy Mr. O'Hara, still swaying unsteadily but beaming assuredly under a Napoleonic hat of vivid red.

She cast a quick glance at the orchestra leader, praying that he would hold off another minute before blowing his whistle.

Now she was in Mr. O'Hara's arms, and he, unmindful of the routine of the dance took quick advantage of the situation. He led her out of the circle, stepped her into a brisk, old-time two-step. Presently the whistle did sound, and the others resumed the dancing, so there was nothing to do but enjoy these few moments of Mr. O'Hara's brief abandonment.

"Tha's the little girl!" he approved heartily. "We'll show 'em Boy, you're some li'l stepper, baby!"

Perhaps the afternoon had sobered him; perhaps the music uplifted him. Whatever it was, there was no weakening in his spirit. True, he was out of step and incapable of keeping off tender toes, but what he lacked in technique he more than made up for in enthusiasm.

"How're we doing, beautiful? Not so bad for an ol' guy, am I?"

In between his casual remarks, his lusty voice would now and then be raised exuberantly, in tune and out of tune, to the orchestra's selection.

After the first few steps, Joyce forgot to worry about him. Let him have his fun, she thought, with a bit of Aunt Martha's philosophy. After all, he doesn't have much chance, not with Old Pickle-Puss always behind him.

The whistle sounded once more and the dancers fell into a line of march. But not Mr. O'Hara.

"Think I'm going to change partners now?" he demanded. "No, sir-ee-ee!"

So they kept up a little dance of their own, a dance which was a bit of a two-step and something of a fox-trot, and not at all unlike an Alabama cake-walk. And the others who danced turned to look at them, and those who sat at nearby tables laughed appreciatively, and Joyce laughed too because—well, what of it?

Into a circle the dancers formed, and Mr. O'Hara continued his little specialty in the very center of it, while those about paused for a moment to applaud his efforts. Right and left went the dancers, and presently new partners found each other quickly at the sound of the whistle. And still Joyce danced with Napoleon O'Hara.

Now, prancing past the captain, he smiled proudly. "How'm I doin', Captain?" And Captain Boyer grinned good-naturedly. "Fine!" he assured him.

But enough is enough. Joyce decided. The prespiration was forming in tiny beads on her forehead and her feet could stand no more, yet her partner showed no indication of giving up.

"I think I'll have to stop," she protested finally. "It's so very warm—"

"Nonsense!" protested the gentleman, tightening his hold about her waist. "We're just beginning to step. Beautiful. Say, can you do the Big Apple."

"No. I'm sorry—"

"What? All the young people are doing the Big Apple. It goes like this . . .

In some devious fashion he began to limber his knees, to bend them this way and that, looking for all the world like a toy balloon on a string.

Over his shoulder, Joyce cast an appealing glance toward Mr. Gregory, sitting expressionless at their table. But whether he understood the appeal or not, he made no move to help her out of the situation.

Now they were indeed becoming ridiculous, yet Joyce only aggravated the matter by attempting to free herself. "I.l look like a fool," she thought, "if I try to say how-dare-you-sir after letting it go this far. . . . If only Dick were here—"

Finally, across the deck, she caught Mr. Roberts' eye and he winked back, understandingly, and made his way toward the orchestra, thinking, perhaps, if the music stopped so would Mr. O'Hara.

But before he had taken two steps, relief did come to Joyce, and from a very unexpected source. She felt a strong hand on her shoulder, and she was spun quickly about, to face a still furious Mrs. O'Hara.

"Haven't you made a sufficient spectacle of yourself today?" she demanded of her husband through tight lips.

Sheepishly, he tried to explain. His wife paid no attention. Instead she turned to Joyce, and in a voice which carried over the entire deck, [illegible] young woman, [illegible] you to keep away from my husband."

CHAPTER IX

THE Empress was due to land at Nassau in the Bahamas early Thursday morning. All day Monday and Tuesday, the weather had been mild and calm, without a [illegible] Bermuda. But [illegible] squalls, sending the passengers scuttling off decks.

The rain came up suddenly, almost without warning. At 3:30 Joyce and Dick and several other young people were swimming about in the outside pool, marveling at the warmth of the water being pumped in from the Gulf Stream. Then, quite suddenly, the water began to chill, and 10 minutes later the sun was hidden behind a wide, deepening range of dark clouds which had appeared from nowhere.

"I guess that's the end of our swimming," Dick remarked, pulling Joyce up the ladder. "The thermometer must have dropped 20 degrees in the last few minutes."

She climbed over the edge of the pool and wrapped herself quickly in a large bath towel. Now the rain was pouring down upon them in torrents.

"You'll be sneezing at dinner again tonight," she warned Dick.

"I will not!" he contradicted with emphasis. "I tell you I never catch cold. It's an allergy . . ."

Across the deck they heard Mrs. O'Hara's pettish voice raising a fuss with one of the deck stewards because he couldn't move her chair quickly enough.

"There's someone else on the boat who has an allergy," Joyce remarked grimly.

Dick grinned. "Don't tell me she can't eat lemons!"

"No. It's more personal. I think shes allergic to me."

"What does that mean?"

"I don't understand myself. But every time she looks at me she has a seizure."

"I can explain it," he said. His eyes rested on Joyce, trim and youthful and eager, lovely to look at even in the disfiguring folds of a Turkish towel. "Every time she looks at you she sees a picture of what she'd like to be."

Next morning the weather was worse if anything, with heavy easterly winds churning up the waves. At the breakfast table Dr. Gray held out little hope that they would touch at Nassau that day.

Joyce's face clouded for an instant. "I did want to see Nassau," she admitted.

"It's terribly disappointing, really it is," Isobel assured her with superiority. "Except for the British Colonial Hotel and Dirty Dick's, there's not a thing in Nassau. And Paradise Beach—it's a joke!"

Dick smiled. "The whole trouble is that we New Yorkers compare every beach in the world with Jones Beach. We're spoiled."

"What is Dirty Dick's" Joyce asked.

"A saloon," Isobel said flatly.

The doctor shook his head. "Oh, come now, Miss Porter, it's better than that." To Joyce he explained: "I guess you'd call it Nassau's 'hot spot.' A friend of mine is the proprietor, one of the finest gentlemen I've ever met. It's a great gathering place for tourists."

"Sort of a night club?" Joyce inquired.

"Not exactly. Though you can have your own entertainment. There's always a darkey about, with a guiatr in his arms and rhythm in his feet, ready to serenade one through the open windows."

"And the famous song of the islands," Dick added, "is a soulful ballad called 'Mama no want no rice nor beans nor cocoanut oil'."

Dr. Gray laughed. "It must have 50 different verses. . . . We'll have the orchestra play it tonight, Miss Milner, so you won't feel so completely cheated out of Nassau."

Nevertheless, she did regret missing it. The Empress skirted the island, and through binoculars the passengers were able to get only a fair view of certain points of interest.

But the morning brought its bright spot of good fortune to Joyce, to make up for the treachery of the weather.

Mrs. Porter, with an extra day to fill in with entertainment, hastened to arrange a bingo party in the main lounge.

"Let's try our luck," Dick suggested, after they had seen all there was to see of Nassau through his binoculars.

"It's always fun to try,' Joyce agreed, "though I've lost a great deal of faith in my own luck."

"Mine's holding up pretty well Otherwise I would never have found you on the Empress."

An hour later, he had spent $4 and between them they had played eight unsuccessful cards.

"Remember, I warned you," Joyce reminded.

"One more card each," he insisted stubbornly. "Then I'll be ready to admit defeat."

And it was on this very last card that Joyce was the winner, with $22 ready to tuck into her lovely but empty new pocketbook and lift her out of the poverty she had suffered since the Empress sailed.

As the day wore on and the rain continued, an undercurrent of irritation developed among the passengers. They chafed at the weather and made a big disaster of their disappointment that they had come this far and not visited Nassau. What was the matter with the steamship company? Why couldn't the captain enter the harbor from another angle? Why did they advertise a stop at Nassau? The ship was a veritable kindergarten of spoiled children who could not go out in the rain to play. Most of the men had drifted to the smoking room, to seek consolation in tall glasses, and there the steward kept them contented with new and improved games of chance.

Noticing the apparent cheer in that quarter, Mrs. Porter hurried to the main lounge, where the other passengers sulked and complained. If games work for the men, she was thinking, perhaps we'd better get up something like that for the women. It couldn't be bingo again; not after the whole morning session of it. Perhaps the horse racing, she decided. Women always enjoyed that. It was better out on deck, of course, where there was ample room, but it was worth the effort, eevn though it crowded a few people back to the wall.

So long strips of canvas were laid down on top of the carpet, and the whole length of the lounge became a track where wooden horses were raced along the marked canvas in paces determined by the fall of the dice. Spectators crowded the room on either side of the canvas strips, and at times when the Empress hit an especially strong wave, they threatened to topple over on top of the horses. But it was amusement and there was always the chance of winning, and contentment reigned again.

"You might as well take another chance," Dick advised Joyce as they watched the game through the window. "This is your lucky day."

"And risk my $22?" Joyce demanded with a touch of Aunt Martha's practical Yankee shrewdness. "Besides," she pointed out, seeing how people were crowded back to the wall, and sitting cross-legged right up to the very edge of the canvas, "there's not room for a mouse to squeeze in there."

"We'll find a spot," Dick promised her.

They went into the lounge, and because Mr. Hamilton was a good patron of every ship's game, the steward managed to discover a few inches of floor space, close to the canvas, where they, too, might sit cross-legged and play their ponies.

"I'll take No. 6," Dick decided, as the next race was called. "What about you, Joyce?"

"I don't expect two good fortunes in one day," she decided, "so I'll take No. 6, too, and let you keep the winnings."

Now the bets were all in, and the race was on. Five and one, the first throw of the dice brought forth. So Horse No. 5 moved forward one pace on the canvas. Six and two, said the dice. And their horse moved up two paces. Soon all six horses were half-way down the track, directly in front of where they sat, and Horse No. 6 was closest to them, and lagging behind the others.

Underneath her weight, Joyce felt pins and needles in her left foot, and she shifted to the right

"I'd be more comfortable," Dick remarked, "if I'd been raised in a harem. Sitting on chairs makes a fellow soft."

He started to shift, too. And the Empress shifted with him, and because they shifted Joyce's way, her sleeping left foot skidded out from under her.

"Another such shift," she cautioned, "and I'll be riding our horse at the finish."

They laughed and settled back into their square inches.

Immediately a voice which Joyce was beginning to associate with disaster called out from somewhere behind them.

"Wait a minute, steward!" Mrs. O'Hara ordered sharply. "Those people in front are cheating. Their horse is No. 6, and I saw that girl deliberately kick it forward."

Joyce looked at the canvas. True, their horse had slipped forward another pace. She must have kicked it, not noticing because her foot was numb.

"Sorry, steward," Dick called cheerily, moving the wooden horse back. "I meant to kick it over the goal line."

Mrs. O'Hara's caustic tongue disturbed him not at all; in fact, recalling the picture of a large dripping woman being pulled aboard, he saw only the humor of the situation. Her intimation that he tried to cheat just did not register in his honest mind, so he could not be offended.

But Joyce, feeling the sharp eyes upon her, flushed uneasily. She could almost hear the curious whispers behind her back. "That's the same girl she pulled away from her husband last night . . . didn't you see it?"

Court Rules for Stan Laurel On Support Action

LOS ANGELES, April 16.—Comedian Stan Laurel who says he has a struggle to get by on $160,000 a year, with three wives, an agent and income tax cutting into it, had one less worry today. Superior Judge Leslie E. Still denied the plea of Mrs. Louis N. Laurel, his first wife, for $1,355 a month for support of their 10-year-old daughter Lois.

"Y" Leaders Hold Annual Meeting

Annual meeting of the Junior Leaders of the Edmonton Y.M.C.A. was held in the banquet room of the Royal George hotel on Thursday evening. Specially invited guests were Dr. M. A. McIntyre, A. D. Youmans, Al. Collins and John Tarbox. Past-president Jack Moffat presided at the meeting. After supper, Mr. Youmans, addressed the boys briefly, and George MacDonald lead a sing-song.

Retiring Secretary-Treasurer Harry Kirkland gave his reports for the past year and this was followed by election of a new slate of officers. The executive will consist of, Lorne Dunsworth, president; Ralph Loder, vice-president; Bob Jackson, secretary-treasurer.

FLOWERS GROW AS GAS FLARES IN OIL VALLEY

Artificial Heat Hastens Spring In Turner Field

By GEORGE FINLAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CALGARY, April 16.—Spring comes early to Turner Valley, the rolling foothills country of the Rockies where a new oil development frontier is in the making.

Among the scores of giant, steel-masted derricks, huge fiery gas flares, burning more than 200,000,000 cubic feet of waste gas a day, create an artificial warmth around the wells to bring spring flowers in full bloom long before they appear on the farm and rangelands.

CROCUS BLOOMS

The mauve colored "prairie crocus" were in bloom 10 days ago and other spring flowers were out in the favored "warm" spots of the valley.

Easter bouquets are there for the picking, but they attract little attention from the 7,000 residents in the Turner Valley area, which includes hundreds of oil well workers at the more than 200 wells along the 15 miles of new frontier. But to tourists and city-folk it is a spring-time miracle.

GIANT FLARES

The giant flares, which soon may disappear, burn day and night, lighting a path of red across the sky that may be seen in Calgary, 45 miles to the northwest. Alberta's government, with the cooperation of oil producers, is mapping out a program of gas conservation.

A enservation board is to be appointed under the newly-enacted Petroleum and Gas Conservation act to save the millions of feet of gas going to waste daily.

The flares—known as "just bonfires" to Valley folk—are a friend to motorists if the car battery happens to be low during a night tour of the oil fields. In the vicinity of the big ones a car can be driven over many sections of the road without the glow of headlights.

BOOM TOWNS

Today it is the south field, where the new boom towns of Little Chicago and Little New York are located, that is attracting the attention of the oilmen.

When the first crude well roared in in June, 1936, it marked a new south field and today 40 crude producers are in production, held down by a 42% proration schedule while producers work to create greater markets for Alberta's oil.

And drilling continues day and night on new well locations. More than 30 "rigs" are drilling today. More wells will be "spudded" as the spring program of development gets underway.

HOLES MILE DEEP

Turner Valley wells are "deep holes," many more than a mile in depth. Drilling costs are high, ranging from $175,000 to $212,000 for each well. In the east Texas and Oklahoma fields of the United States a 7,000-foot well can be drilled for around $85,000.

Last year $10,000,000 was spent in the Valley, it has been estimated. This year it may be greater.

A standard airplane parachute is 24 feet in diameter when spread open. It has a descent rate of between 16 to 24 feet per second, depending on the weight of the wearer.

EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, April 16—Report from stockyards for week ending April 14.—

Receipts:	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep
Saturday	170	256	201	22

There has been no material change noticeable in the market this past week. All offerings of good handyweight cattle have been cleaned up quite readily under brisk trading, except heavy steers which were inclined to be slow movers. Prices on the whole remain steady to firm. Heavy steers a shade easier. Cows stronger, with the odd lightweight cow making up to 4.25. The following were the ruling quotations:—

Fed calves $5 to $6, good to choice steers $5.25 to $6, fair to medium $4.50 to $5, common to fair from $3 to $4.50, good to choice heifers $5 to $5.50, fair to medium $4.25 to $4.75, and common to fair $3 to $4.25, good cows $3.75 to $4, common to medium $2.50 to $3.50, canners and cutters, $2 to $2.50, bulls, $2.75 to $3.75.

There are insufficient stockers and feeders arriving to make or establish a market. Quotations steady at $4 down.

The calf market continues active and values generally firm, with good to choice kinds from $7 to $8, others from $6.50 down.

Hogs remain fairly steady. On Thursday, at the close, trucked bacons sold at $9.40, with selects bringing a premium of 50c per cwt. and butchers discounted 50c per cwt.

Lambs generally are showing a firmer undertone, and are quoted from $8.75 down. Insufficient sheep arriving to make a market, yearlings quoted from $5 down, and ewes $4 down.

Federal Grant To Aid Education Urged By C.C.F.

TORONTO, April 16.—A federal education grant to provinces to be paid "on the basis of need and of such dimensions as will ensure an equality of opportunity for all Canadians," is urged by the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation of Ontario.

Delegates to the annual convention which opened last night also approved a resolution the Dominion government lift what Sam Lawrence of Hamilton termed its embargo against Spain. Mr. Lawrence criticized "the so-called non-intervention policy which denies the Spanish government the right to obtain supplies necessary to the defence of Spanish democracy."

The resolution urging the federal subsidy to be earmarked "specifically for education" was sponsored by F. P. Hall of Central Collegiate, London. Mr. Hall also sponsored a resolution, approved by the convention, requesting the Ontario government to increase "substantially" its education grants.

Died For Pets

WASHINGTON, N.J., April 16.—Simeon Smith, 88, and his wife Anna Smith, 78, recluses and both crippled, died in their home in fire from a lamp overturned by a cat. They had refused to go to the poorhouse because they could not take their dogs and cats.

WINNIPEG WHEAT MARKET LISTLESS

WINNIPEG, April 16.—Winnipeg wheat futures moved listlessly within a one-cent range today, closing ⅛ lower to ⅛ cent higher. May $1.26, July $1.15½, Oct. 90¾ cents.

With Liverpool, major overseas market, closed until Tuesday and importers generally keeping out the market, North American wheat dealings were quiet. Sudden sharp upturn in securities, however, contributed to firmness of wheat.

Canadian export sales during the Good Friday holiday were small.

Prices moved fractionally higher early today on reports of severe frost damage in the Texas panhandle 10 days ago. The buying flurry was shortlived, however.

Cash wheat prices eased a cent. Nos. 1 and 2 to 17 and 7 cents premium above the May future. Other grades were unchanged.

Stagnant coarse grain futures market resulted in little change from Thursday's closing prices. Flax was neglected.

Aero Club Notes

News of Captain "Moss" Burbidge's acceptance of a position with Trans-Canada Airways came with startling suddenness to club members, who have long had a warm spot in their hearts for "good old Moss". It is hard to imagine the club without that familiar figure in the Harris tweed jacket and flannels who sent so many well-known fliers on their first solo after patiently drilling into them the fundamentals of flying.

According to Canadian aviation records, "Moss" has trained one out of every twelve pilots flying in Canada today. It will be hard to find a man capable of filling his shoes, but club officials are looking over a large field of applicants, and a capable instructor will soon be appointed. Club members wish Capt. Burbidge every success in his new position.

Pat Oakes, brother of Ralph Oakes, United Air Transport pilot, has commenced dual instruction.

Herman Bertell recommenced flying the other day, after a period of inactivity since last fall.

Club officials decided to have CF-CBN overhauled in Calgary and to that end Jack Ross flew it down. He reports an uneventful trip, and not much activity around the Calgary airport.

There is a possibility that a more powerful engine will be purchased for the Fleet, enabling the plane to reach a greater altitude on the daily weather flights. The present plane usually reaches an altitude of about 14,000 or 15,000 feet; our weather officials wish to take experimental readings at greater heights.

Bill Leysk was seen the other day soloing the Cirrus Moth around the field.

With the past week of good weather, the "Old Reliable" G-CYYG has been seeing lots of service, and if the present weather holds out, it is expected that many passengers will be carried during the week-end.

Bob Halpenney recently flew the Fox Moth CF-API from Ft. St. John to Edmonton for the United Air Service.

Ronnie Keith, Jack Danning and Bob Cuthill are taking dual instructions.

Last reports of Don Patty in his Puss Moth had him in the vicinity of the Liard river. It is expected that he will return to Edmonton shortly, however.

Chris Moon is back off the Mackenzie Air Service Bellanca, after piling up lots of time in the right-hand cockpit. He will be in town over breakup and expects to do some flying with the Club machines, with the object of getting his time for his transport license.

Chester Moffet intends to take up blind flying with the ultimate intention of procuring his transport license.

MME. DUGGAN DIES AT HOME HERE FRIDAY

to J. J. Duggan in her native town of Builth, at the Memorial Baptist chapel, thus culminating a romance that had commenced when Mr. Duggan had heard her play as a girl of 12.

In 1909 they moved to this country and they located at Nanton, where they remained for six years. Mme. Duggan's musical attainments were immediately felt in the vicinity. She trained competitors for the Claresholm Musical Festival and her students made a clean sweep of prizes, except one.

On removal to this city, Mme. Duggan immediately plunged into the social and musical life and she maintained an unbroken record of activity until her illness precluded further participation.

LOYAL SERVICE

Always interested in the welfare of the Women's Musical club, she served a three-year term a decade ago, when much pioneering was done and when foundations were well laid for the series of Celebrity concerts that have since followed.

For 15 years she conducted the Women's Musical Club chorus and it is a warm tribute to her personal qualities of leadership and musicianship that since her illness its activities were halted. During the last season of the club public tribute was paid her work in connection with this organization and a resolution was passed expressing hope for her early return to the conductor's podium.

In the affairs of the Musical club her ripe experience, her unfailing good judgment and willingness to help were valued. Her work with the Musical Club chorus is a lasting contribution to the higher standards of this form of musical endeavor.

When she yielded to insistence and took up adjudicating at musical festivals, both in the vocal and elocution classes, she was in great demand. Her spontaneous, bright, helpful, constructive adjudications were highly appreciated by competitors.

None felt the sting of being sarcasm or criticism and all derived benefit from the helpful suggestions offered from her deep store of knowledge, wide practical experience, gained in Europe and on this continent and culminating in 24 years of service to music in this city.

She is survived by her husband and one son Kenneth. Two sisters also survive, Mrs. Ernest Meaden, of this city, and Mrs. D. I. Davies, of Swansea, Wales. Her only brother Raymond Evans was killed in action in France while serving with the 49th Batt., the Edmonton regiment. D. M. Duggan, M.L.A., is a brother-in-law.

The funeral will be held at 2:30 p.m. on Monday at Knox United church, with arrangements being made by Hainstock and Son.

Burial will take place in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Space in the church will be reserved for members of the Women's Musical Club and the Welsh Society.

LAG IN OUTPUT RAISES FRENCH COAL PROBLEM

Virtually Every Miner Has a Job, But Imports Are Increasing

By H. G. KING

PARIS, April 16.—Although France has never been able to satisfy all requirements in coal lacking several of the types needed in heavy industries, latest statistics show that home production is beginning to lag and imports are increasing rapidly.

The coal industry in France has seen its means of existence completely modified during the past 18 months. A study of the returns reveals that cost of production has increased considerably (labor accounts for about two-thirds of the cost of production), while there has been a big drop in production owing to the application of the 40-hour week. Foreign importers also have been benefitted by the depreciation of the franc.

EXAMINE POINTS

To examine these points one by one, wage statistics show that the application of the Matignon accord in June, 1936, increased salaries by 12 to 16 per cent. There followed on the steps of this increase three more, the first in February, 1937, with an average added increase of 5 per cent., the second in May, 1937, also of 5 per cent., and a third in October, 1937, of 7 per cent. This entailed a proportionate rise in incidentals immediately connected with wages—such as social assurances—so that now the actual cost of labor can be considered as being 70 to 75 per cent. higher than 18 months ago.

PAID VACATIONS GRANTED

Production itself was dealt three successive blows. The first was paid vacations, nearly all taking place in August (for the Nord and Pas-de-Calais departments production for August, 1937, was only 1,491,000 tons compared with 2,146,000 tons in July), the second blow was the application of the 40-hour week which in actual practice means 38 hours actual work while the third is a fall in the daily individual production of each miner. In June, 1937, individual production was about 1,600 pounds a day which was 9 per cent lower than the figure for the first three months of 1936.

The industry has taken on virtually every available miner to be found in France, besides having brought in a large number of foreign specialists, and in the Nord and Pas de Calais departments alone the figure rose from 221,606 miners in May, 1936, to 241,629 in October, 1937. But despite this, production has fallen considerably and for the foregoing two departments the net production for the first six months of 1937 was 22,143,350 tons which is 1,760,000 tons less than for the corresponding period of 1936.

RED DEER

Oil Company On Calgary Trail Is Almost Completed

Hydro-Pete Oils Ltd., oil refinery, about a mile south of Red Deer on the Calgary and Edmonton highway is nearly ready for operation. The plant will handle from 200 to 250 barrels of crude oil per day, the oil being trucked in from Turner Valley and the Montana field. The complete staff is not yet on the job but R. W. Peacock has been engaged as plant superintendent, F. J. Setters as accountant, and H. Amundrud as shipper. There will be a still operator, a number of truck drivers and probably a few more men to work at the plant.

RED DEER

Gopher Week Is Set At Red Deer

April 13 to 23 has been set as Gopher Destruction Week in the Municipal District of Pine Lake and with the co-operation of the ratepayers the M.D. council hopes to destroy many of the pests. There has been an increase in the number of gophers in the district and they have become a serious problem to deal with. The M.D. council is supplying one bottle of poison free for each quarter section. The M.D. will put out poison and charge the costs to the owner of the land on any place found badly infested with gophers after May 14.

Rev. H. Young died early Friday morning, April 15, at the St. Mary's hospital, Trochu, at the age of 6[illegible] years. Surviving are his wife, five daughters, Mrs. Morris, Bowden; Mrs. Gilmore and Jessie of Kingston, Ont.; Mrs. Baycroft, Quesnel, B.C.; Marjorie at Trochu; two sons, Gordon at Creston, B.C., and Douglas of Trochu.

GRANDE PRAIRIE

Charles Turner Is Elected President

Charles Turner was elected president of the Grande Prairie branch of the Canadian Legion at a combined smoker and business meeting held on Vimy night. Other officers elected were, first vice-president, Chester Miller; second vice-president, Norman Leslie; third vice-president, L. Hutt; executive, J. Shields, J. M. Smart, J. Putters, A. Childs and J. A. Whitlock; secretary, O. Falconar.

Retiring President C. C. Fleming was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for his untiring services during past years.

Considerable discussion took place in regard to the Legion taking over the Immigration Hall from the government and using it for a gymnasium or other youth training centre which this town lacks.

A most enjoyable smoker followed. Community singing, vocal and instrumental numbers were featured. The following night the Legion presented a Vimy night over CFGP with J. Pickard as master of ceremonies. A. Walker of Calgary, president of the provincial command who was unable to be present, sent an inspiring message by remote control.

ERSKINE

Ploughing Started South Of Erskine

Teams on the Gabriel farm one mile south of Erskine are on the land plowing. The land too wet yet for cultivating is just right for spring plowing with teams, although too heavy yet for tractors.

Spring work has swung into full since the last few warm days for carpenters are busy. T. Rudd who purchased an Erskine home during the winter, is putting in a new foundation and expects to add a verandah and stucco the outside.

GRANDE PRAIRIE

Grande Prairie Council Is Busy

The town council of Grande Prairie has been busy lately with special meetings and committees to carry on the business arising out of the preparations for the installation of the sewer and water system. [illegible] & Miles, consulting engineers, Calgary, has accepted the contract to supervise the installation and will remain here as long as necessary. Actual construction will begin in May and there is a hope that the first unit will be in operation by fall.

A new well will be drilled about 200 feet south of the town's two present wells, the site having been chosen after extensive tests. Site for a sewage disposal plant have been obtained.

At the request of a delegation from the tennis club the council gave permission to use three lots on the recreation grounds for courts as the site of the old tennis court has been sold recently.

KILLAM

H. Chandler To Succeed M. Halsall

At a board meeting of the Killam District Co-operative Association Ltd. Monday, Mr. H. Chandler of Wetaskiwin was chosen as manager to succeed M. Halsall, who has resigned. Mr. Chandler will commence work the first of May.

FAUST

Bovines At Faust Have Queer Tastes

When a cow belonging to Peter Friesen, east of Faust acquired a taste for dressed rabbits some time ago, it seems quite an oddity, but when the following winter, A. Several fur farmers have had to fence their racks in, upon which they dry the fish for their animals.

VANCOUVER IS PLANNING FOR SEAPLANE BASE

$1,000,000 Project Would Be Link in Imperial Airways Route

VANCOUVER, April 16.—Tentative plans and estimates of a huge seaplane base on nearby Sea Island will be submitted to the city council next week, William Templeton, Vancouver airport manager, announced Friday.

Dredging for the project will cost about $1,000,000 Templeton said.

He explained that the base would be the first step in the development of the airport as a base for trans-Pacific flights by Imperial Airways. Cost of the scheme would be borne by the Dominion government and the airline company, he said.

Captain Frank Entwistle of the British government's meteorological service announced here recently that Imperial Airways had planned to make the Vancouver airport their Pacific coast base.

Lakehead, West Hold Most Wheat Bureau Reports

OTTAWA, April 16—The greater part of Canada's wheat stock of 84,160,585 bushels as estimated by the Dominion bureau of statistics, is held in western Canada and at the lakehead.

The bureau's breakdown of the total shows 13,143,928 bushels stored in public and semi-public terminals and private elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur.

Interior public and semi-public elevators in the west hold 1,082,759 bushels; Vancouver and New Westminster elevators 1,490,746; Prince Rupert elevator 292,279; Churchill 11,820.

There are 1,925,000 bushels in eastern flour mills and 7,380,276 in eastern elevators.

STATE HOUSING SWEEPS AWAY BRITISH HOVELS

Nearly 3½ Million Units Built In England, Wales Since 1918

LONDON, April 16—The government, national or local, guides Britain's huge housing program—which has been under way with increasing impetus since the World War.

More than 3,328,000 houses have been built in England and Wales—with scores of additional thousands constructed in Scotland—since 1918. Private enterprise, without government subsidy, built approximately half of these homes, but private enterprise concerns itself mostly with better class residences and flats.

The importance of government's part in British rehousing is shown by these official figures: total capital expenditure on subsidized housing since 1919 is approximately $3,612,500,000, and despite this staggering sum the story is not yet told. Government commitments in most cases are on an annual basis, running 20 to 60 years. Government payments on housing commitments for the year ending March 31, 1937, totalled $71,694,470. During the same period loans to private builders totaling $159,935,000 were sanctioned.

In addition government (usually municipalities) is the biggest landlord in Britain, or in the world for that matter.

The London County Council alone owns outright and rents to working people 80,468 dwellings housing more than 350,000 persons. Other population centres such as Birmingham, Manchester and Leeds follow the same plan on a somewhat smaller scale.

Probably most important, however, are the national housing acts—especially those dealing with slum clearance and abatement of overcrowding. National laws empower local authorities to "declare" slum areas for clearance. Annually scores of areas populated by many thousands are so handled. Similar powers were granted regarding overcrowding, even though the area in question is above slum classification.

This powerful stimulus inevitably results in much private building. Where private enterprise is unwilling or unable to proceed, local authorities take over the task.

FARM HOMES NOT NEGLECTED

These measures operate in rural as well as urban areas. Some of the worst habitations discovered in a national survey were on farms. Large families were found living in ancient stone cottages which investigators called "dens, not fit for animals." Thousands of such farm cottages have been condemned.

Other bad spots are the east end of London and the industrial cities of the northeast, where the familiar slum problem exists.

Although most economists credit British rehousing as the principal factor in pulling the country out of the post-war depression, social betterment had an equal or greater influence in inaugurating the gigantic program which to date has rehoused approximately a third of the population. The greatest share of the new houses are workingmen's dwellings. The worker receives preference in all municipal houses. When his income goes past a nominal figure, he is asked to move to a higher-rent privately owned home and make way for a less fortunate family.

And, significantly, the entire rehousing program in Britain is administered by and is under the complete control of the minister for health.

700 SAILORS ON STRIKE IN SEVEN PORTS

Great Lakes Shipping Tied Up—More Seamen May Quit

TORONTO, April 16—Canadian Seamen's union strike call was answered by 700 members in seven Canadian ports early today, union headquarters announced, with the expectation the number would be tripled over the week-end.

The strike followed an ultimatum by J. A. Sullivan, Montreal, president of the union, to seven Canadian companies, demanding they permit seamen to join the C.S.U.

PICKETING

Strikers took up picketing in Toronto along the waterfronts of other cities.

Union officials said half the Canadian vessels on the Great Lakes would not leave port, although summer insurance rates became effective at one a.m.

An hour after midnight (10 p.m. P.S.T.) deadline for the strike, President Sullivan announced this outline of the situation:

Toronto—Crews of nine vessels out. About 200 pickets trudged along the waterfront.

Kingston—About 200 sailors were on strike or ready to quit work.

Fort William—Eighteen crew members of the Paterson Steamship Company's freighter Mantadoc locked themselves in the ship's galley, demanding they be allowed to sail as C.S.A. members.

Goderich—About 45 men on strike, crew members of three boats.

Montreal—Fourteen of the crew of the Canadian Lake Carriers Ltd boat "Stillwater" went ashore and picketing.

Owen Sound—Men from three boat crews on strike.

Collingwood—Full crew of only boat in port on strike.

WANT OTHER AGENCY

Sullivan said the response of the men indicated they wished the C.S.U. as their bargaining agency rather than the Canadian Brotherhood of Ship's Employees, headed by Captain H. N. McMaster.

Approach Made To Settle Difficulties

TORONTO, April 16—J. A. Sullivan, president of the Canadian Seamen's Union, said today one of the large Canadian steamship companies had approached the union in an effort to settle the strike started last night by the union for a collective bargaining agreement with seven Canadian companies.

"I can't tell you which company has approached us," Sullivan said, "but I expect a settlement within a few hours."

[illegible] the federal department of labor and the department of transport of developments in the strike against 150 Canadian vessels but had not appealed for assistance.

"We have taken action and I think it will be a short strike."

Last Roundup For Pioneer Rancher In South Country

HIGH RIVER, Alta., April 16—An associate of the early day cattle barons of Alberta, Everard R. Wilder, 88, pioneer High River rancher, died in hospital here last night.

Born in Detroit, Mich., Mr. Wilder came to Alberta in 1880 coming to the south country with a cattle outfit from Nebraska. Mrs. Wilder, a son, J. E. Wilder of Hollywood, Calif., and two daughters survive.

Hudson Maxim, inventor of Maximite and high explosives, was born on Feb. 3, 1853.

Little Orphan Annie
WHEN OLD CHICAGO BURNED THEY BUILT A FINER CITY--- IN SAN FRANCISCO GREAT BUILDINGS ROSE FROM THE ASHES OF DILAPIDATED SHACKS----AND WHEN THE OVER-WORKED OLD COOK-STOVE FELL APART IT DID NOT SPELL DISASTER TO THESE COURAGEOUS SOULS---THEY TURNED A SMALL REVERSE INTO A STRONG ADVANCE-
WHEW! WERE THEY HUNGRY! BUT THAT'S THE LAST BUS-LOAD TO NIGHT- BUSINESS SURE IS SWELL-
THIS HAS BEEN THE BIGGEST DAY WE'VE HAD-WHEN SUMMER COMES WE'LL HAVE TWICE AS MANY-WE'LL BE READY FOR THEM- WITH THIS NEW STOVE IT'S NO TRICK AT ALL- AND EVERY BATCH OF DOUGHNUTS COMES OUT JUST RIGHT-
GEE, SHANGHAI- YOU'VE BEEN AT IT ALL DAY- AREN'T YOU EVER GOIN' TO QUIT?
JUST ABOUT DONE- FINISH TONIGHT AND IT'LL BE DRY BY MORNING-
YOU'VE SURE MADE THIS INTO A SWELL KITCHEN-
YOU MUST BE COMPLETELY WORN OUT SHANGHAI- YOU'VE BEEN HARD AT IT SINCE DAYLIGHT-
A GOOD JOB WELL DONE? THAT'S NOT TIRING- IT'S USELESS DRUDGERY THAT TIRES ONE OUT- ANYWAY, I'M STILL A PRETTY TOUGH OLD CODGER-
BUT I GUESS IT'S NEARLY BED TIME FOR HONEST FOLKS - I'LL JUST TAKE THAT TRASH OUT TO THE ALLEY AND BURN IT BEFORE I TURN IN-C'MON, SANDY- WANTA TAKE A LITTLE AIR BEFORE Y'GO TO BED?
ARF!
HI, THERE - I SEEN YOU THROUGH TH' WINDER, PAINTIN' - BEEN AT IT ALL DAY, AIN'TCHA? WORK YOU PLENTY HARD, DON'T THEY?
OH, HELLO, BALES - NO - IT WAS MY IDEA - WHEN I SEE WORK TO BE DONE, I DO IT- THAT'S ALL-
NOBODY KIN GIT ME TO DO A TAP MORE'N I HAPPEN TO FEEL LIKE- HUMPH! YOU'RE A FOOL- WORKIN' YERSELF RIGHT OUT OF A JOB, EFFEN YOU ASK ME-
AS A MATTER OF FACT, MATEY, I DIDN'T ASK YOU-DON'T NEED TO GIT SHIRTY ABOUT IT- MAKE A JOB LAST- THAT'S ME - I DO JEST SO MUCH, AN' ANYBODY AS DOES MORE IS A SAP, SEZ I-
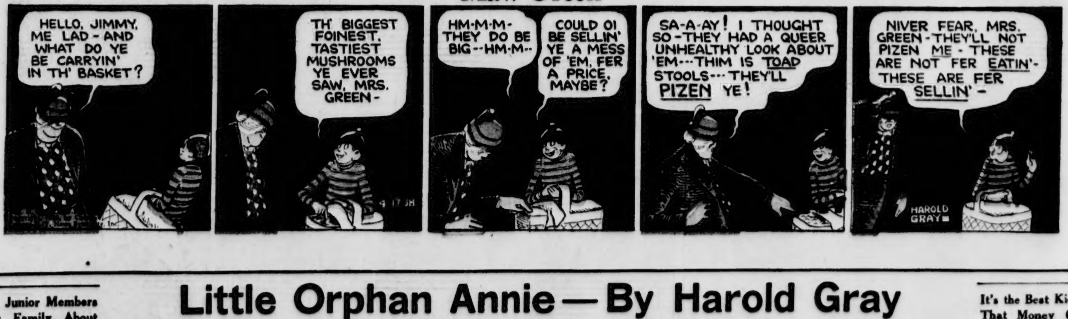
WELL, EVERY ONE CAN'T HAVE YOUR PHILOSOPHY- NO, NOR THE DESIRE TO REACH YOUR GOAL, WHATEVER IT IS-
HUH! S'POSE THEY'LL MAKE YUH RICH, EH? GIT ALL THEY KIN OUT O' YUH, THEN SEND YUH PACKIN'- YOU'LL FIND OUT, SMART FELLER-
WHY, ANNIE - I THOUGHT YOU'D TURNED IN - I DIDN'T SEE YOU STANDING THERE-
SO I'M A FOOL, HE SAYS, TO EXPECT APPRECIATION FOR LOYAL SERVICE--- THE TOUCH OF THAT CHILD'S HAND HELD OUT TO ME - MORE THAN A MILLION WORDS COULD TELL ME - PAY! BAH! WHAT GREATER REWARD THAN THE LOVE AND FAITH OF A LITTLE CHILD?

Maw Green



HELLO, JIMMY, ME LAD - AND WHAT DO YE BE CARRYIN' IN TH' BASKET?
TH' BIGGEST FOINEST, TASTIEST MUSHROOMS YE EVER SAW, MRS. GREEN-
4-17-38
HM-M-M- THEY DO BE BIG--HM-M--
COULD OI BE SELLIN' YE A MESS OF 'EM, FER A PRICE, MAYBE?
SA-A-AY! I THOUGHT SO - THEY HAD A QUEER UNHEALTHY LOOK ABOUT 'EM---THIM IS TOAD STOOLS--- THEY'LL PIZEN YE!
NIVER FEAR, MRS. GREEN - THEY'LL NOT PIZEN ME - THESE ARE NOT FER EATIN'- THESE ARE FER SELLIN' -

POP'S SHOES ARE FUNNY ON A GUY LIKE ME --- WHY, WITH MY SHOES ON I CAN TURN AROUND IN 'EM - HA-HA!
HA-HA -- EE-HEE! FUNNY - I'LL SAY THEY'RE FUNNY -- HA-HA
I NEVER SAW ANYTHING MUCH FUNNIER - HA-HA! TALK ABOUT VIOLIN CASES!
EVERY TIME I LOOK AT THEM I CAN'T CONTROL MYSELF... HA-HAH --- HO-HOH-HOH!
HAW - UH, MY GOSH - THERE'S PORKY POLLOCK --- HE'S BEEN LAYIN' FER ME FER A MONTH! HE COULDN' KETCH ME IN A HUNDRED YEARS, IF -- IF ---- MEATS
TALK BEHIND MY BACK, WILL YA? TAKE THAT AN' THIS, AN' THIS!
OOF
OOF!
AN' --- THIS'N AN' THIS'N --- AN' DON'T FERGIT 'EM - AN' THIS'N!
LOOK! HAAH-HA! HEE YEE!
IT IS FUNNY, ISN'T IT?
WHUT'S FUNNY? WHUT?

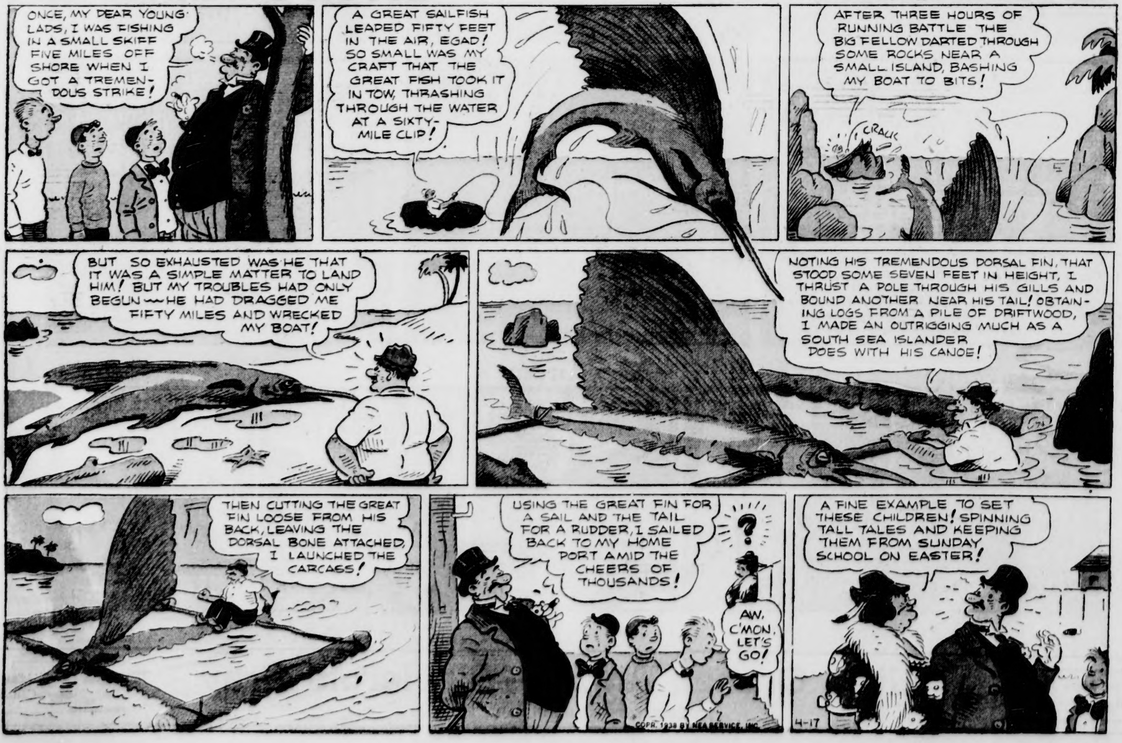
OUR BOARDING HOUSE MAJOR HOOPLE



ONCE, MY DEAR YOUNG LADS, I WAS FISHING IN A SMALL SKIFF FIVE MILES OFF SHORE WHEN I GOT A TREMENDOUS STRIKE!
A GREAT SAILFISH LEAPED FIFTY FEET IN THE AIR, EGAD! SO SMALL WAS MY CRAFT THAT THE GREAT FISH TOOK IT IN TOW, THRASHING THROUGH THE WATER AT A SIXTY-MILE CLIP!
AFTER THREE HOURS OF RUNNING BATTLE THE BIG FELLOW DARTED THROUGH SOME ROCKS NEAR A SMALL ISLAND, BASHING MY BOAT TO BITS!
CRACK
BUT SO EXHAUSTED WAS HE THAT IT WAS A SIMPLE MATTER TO LAND HIM! BUT MY TROUBLES HAD ONLY BEGUN - HE HAD DRAGGED ME FIFTY MILES AND WRECKED MY BOAT!
NOTING HIS TREMENDOUS DORSAL FIN, THAT STOOD SOME SEVEN FEET IN HEIGHT, I THRUST A POLE THROUGH HIS GILLS AND BOUND ANOTHER NEAR HIS TAIL! OBTAINING LOGS FROM A PILE OF DRIFTWOOD, I MADE AN OUTRIGGING MUCH AS A SOUTH SEA ISLANDER DOES WITH HIS CANOE!
THEN CUTTING THE GREAT FIN LOOSE FROM HIS BACK, LEAVING THE DORSAL BONE ATTACHED, I LAUNCHED THE CARCASS!
USING THE GREAT FIN FOR A SAIL AND THE TAIL FOR A RUDDER, I SAILED BACK TO MY HOME PORT AMID THE CHEERS OF THOUSANDS!
AW, C'MON, LET'S GO!

THIS CURIOUS WORLD
ORANG-UTANS
ARE NEAREST TO MAN IN BRAIN, AND SEVERAL OTHER POINTS OF STRUCTURE, OF ALL THE GREAT ANTHROPOID APES! THEY ARE TO BE FOUND ONLY IN EASTERN SUMATRA, AND PARTS OF BORNEO.
THE MALE, KNOWN AS "MAN-OF-THE-WOODS," ATTAINS A HEIGHT OF FOUR FEET! GREAT BLUE-BLACK CHEEK PROTUBERANCES AND A SET OF RED WHISKERS GIVE HIM A MOST PECULIAR APPEARANCE.
AT NIGHT, THE ORANG FAMILY SLEEPS IN HASTILY CONSTRUCTED NESTS OF STICKS . . . 25 TO 50 FEET FROM THE GROUND.
THE YOUNG, LIKE HUMAN INFANTS, MAKE THEIR WANTS KNOWN BY CRYING.
WILLIAM FERGUSON
COPR. 1938 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.
THE ORANG MOVES ALONG THROUGH THE TREES BY SWINGING FROM BRANCH TO BRANCH BY ITS ENORMOUSLY LONG ARMS.
IN CAPTIVITY THEY ADOPT MAN'S HABITS! "MOLLY," A MELBOURNE ZOO APE, HAD TO HAVE FIRE PROOF QUARTERS, DUE TO HER SMOKING OF CIGARETTES, WHICH SHE LIGHTED HERSELF.

DANNY AND FRECKLES HAVE LOCATED THE SOURCE OF THE FALSE RADIO BEAMS AND LAND IN A SNOWBANK NEARBY.....
PERFECT, DANNY! YOU DID IT! AN ALL-POINT LANDING!!
LET'S GET OUT OF HERE AND GET TO THAT SHACK BEFORE THOSE MEN LEAVE!
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
HAVE YOU GOT A GUN, DANNY?
I'LL HAVE TO FAKE A GUN.... I'LL PUT MY HAND IN MY POCKET AND FOOL THEM!
YOU'LL FOOL WHO, MISTER? STICK 'EM UP!
GET THE CAR WARMED UP, JOE, WHILE I TAKE CARE OF THESE GUYS WHO DIDN'T MIND THEIR OWN BUSINESS!
IT WON'T FIRE, EDDIE... MOTOR'S TOO COLD! AND WE GOTTA GET OUTTA HERE!!
IF YOU STAY HERE VERY LONG, THE COPS'LL COME! I'LL MAKE YOU A SPORTING PROPOSITION!
WHAT, FOR INSTANCE?
I'M SUPPOSED TO CAPTURE YOU GUYS....IF I DON'T AT LEAST SHOW I TRIED, I'LL LOSE MY JOB!
SO WHAT?
YOU SHOOT A FEW HOLES IN MY COAT.... THAT'LL PROVE I DIDN'T GET YOU ONLY BECAUSE YOU HAD A GUN ON ME!
WHAT DO I GET OUT OF IT?
I'LL START YOUR CAR FOR YOU, AND YOU CAN SCRAM! IS THAT FAIR?
I'LL TAKE IT!

DICK TRACY
CHESTER GOULD
SCENE: THE ORIENTAL RESTAURANT. A LONE GUEST SITS AT ONE OF THE TABLES WATCHING THE DINNER SHOW.
MONSIEUR, WOULD YOU SEND MY WAITER OVER, PLEASE.
YES, SIR.
HOW AM I DOING, DICK?
OKAY, PAT. WHAT HAVE YOU FOUND OUT?
NOTHING, EXCEPT THAT THIS GUY RAMM MERELY OPERATES THE PLACE. HE IS NOT THE OWNER.
SH..SH... HERE COMES RAMM NOW...
EVERYTHING SATISFACTORY, SIR?
SPLENDID! SPLENDID! YOUR RESTAURANT IS —WHAT ZEY SAY— MOST CHARMING, MONSIEUR.
IT SO HAPPENS YOUR WAITER IS NEW HERE —WE HAD TO HIRE HIM YESTERDAY WHEN ONE OF OUR REGULAR MEN DISAPPEARED SUDDENLY.
ZE SERVICE IS MOST SATISFACTORY. (AHA! IF HE ONLY KNEW HIS WAITER IS LOCKED UP AT HEADQUARTERS)
BUT, MONSIEUR, IF YOU WOULD DO SOMETHING —WOULD IT BE ASKING TOO MUCH —TO HAVE ZE BEAUTIFUL CIGARETTE GIRL SIT AT MY TABLE A WHILE, EH?
CERTAINLY NOT! OH, NOANA.
OKAY, NOANA. NOW DO JUST AS PAT INSTRUCTED YOU TO DO.
ALL RIGHT. I'LL TRY TO DO MY BEST.
WHY, YOU CHEAP MASHER! NO ONE CAN INSULT NOANA.
SO YOU TEENK YOU CAN SLAP COUNT PIERRE, EH? TAKE THAT!
YOU PIG! YOU—
HEY, YOU!
COME ON— THROW HIM OUT!
OH, BOY! TRACY AND NOANA ARE CERTAINLY PUTTING ON A GREAT ACT! NOW TO CARRY OUT MY PART WHILE RAMM AND HIS PALS HAVE THEIR ATTENTION DRAWN TO THE FAKE FIGHT—MY JOB IS TO SEARCH HIS DESK FOR ANY PAPERS THAT MAY TELL US WHO THE HEAD OF THE SMUGGLING RING IS!
